SENATORS DEMAND ONE-MAN CONTROL OF AIR PROGRAM

POINTS TO MANY FAILURES

CALL ON PRESIDENT TO ACT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Two reports on the Government's aviation program came from the Senate Military Affairs Committee today, presenting widely differing aspects of the situation.

The majority report contains pointed criticism of the Government for what is characterized as its "disappointing failure" in the airplane program. Procrastination, neglect to arrive at quick decisions, and an "aloofness in dealing with persons having information" as to airplanes are pointed to in the majority report as underlying reasons for the Government's failure to supply its army with aircraft.

The Government is criticised in the majority report for having "misrepresented the progress of the aviation program." This, the report says, has misled the public. The report states that the Government has "no "broad plan looking to the future development" of war planes. It urges "constant expansion" and unceasing effort, and recommends that the aircraft program be taken out of the hands of the Signal Corps, where it has been since last Summer, and that an executive officer, to be appointed by the President, be put in control.

The majority report was signed by Senators Chamberlain, Chairman of the committee; Hitchcock, Reed, and Thomas, Democrats, and Weeks, Wadsworth, New, Frelinghuysen, and Sutherland, Republicans.

Senators Sheppard of Texas, Myers of Montana, and Kirby of Arkansas, all Democrats, put in the minority report defending the Administration and insisting that it has faced extraordinary difficulties that were not easily overcome.

Senators Fletcher, McKellar, and Beckman signed neither report.

Only Fifteen Combat Planes Built.

The majority report reveals that only fifteen combat planes have been completed, and that only one of them has been shipped to France. The Government had before it, the report says, five types of machines, two having been dropped, after great delay in determining what character of machine was wanted. Of the three types, the most powerful, the Handley Page, a heavy bombing machine, was adopted about Jan. 1 last, after what the committee calls "remarkable procrastination and indecision." Witnesses, the report says, testified that the first set of parts of this machine are not expected to be ready before June.

Another combat machine, the De Havliland, carrying two men, is being turned out slowly. Fifteen of these have been completed. The Bristol machine—the third type—was decided upon last November, the report says, and the manufacturers completed the first one about March 30 last.

Equal delay, the report sets forth, occurred in constructing the Liberty motor. Of 22,500 ordered, 264 have been completed and 4 shipped overseas. The failure to rush the manufacture of the Liberty motor is called "gravely disappointing."

Here is the report in full:

"The Committee on Military Affairs, being engaged under authority of the Senate in an investigation of the War Department, and having taken much testimony, herewith submits the following report in the matter of aircraft production, together with certain recommendations:

TRAINING SCHOOLS.

"The Signal Corps has established and is now conducting twenty aviation training schools in the United States. Four additional schools are in process of

Lenine Asks Germany's Leave to Keep Army to Face Japan

LONDON, April 10.—The Bolshevist Government has asked Germany for permission to postpone the demobilization of the Russian Army in consequence of the Japanese landing at Vladivostok, according to reports in circulation in Petrograd and forwarded by Reuter's correspondent.

In a speech at Moscow on Monday, Premier Lenine said that possibly Russia would have to declare war on Japan, and also hinted at grave complications with Great Britain and France, because of their alleged help to the Japanese.

COMMONS PUSHES IRISH DRAFT ACT

ASQUITH ATTACKS MEASURE

LONDON, April 10.—The House of Commons tonight passed the second reading of the Government's man-power bill, which extends conscription to Ireland. The vote was 323 to 100.

In moving the second reading of the bill, Sir George Cave, Unionist Member for Surrey, said that it was the duty of the country to do everything it could do, and then only should it be entitled to use to the fullest extent the help given by its allies. Germany had made Europe an armed camp, he added, and the necessity of taking every man who could be spared was overwhelming.

Sir George said that he had been advised that the application of the man-power bill to Ireland would yield a large number of men, but if only five divisions could be got from Ireland it would be worth while. He did not believe that the army would be needed to force the operation of the measure. Sir George added that even if there were an Irish Parliament today the question of conscription in Ireland still would rest with the Imperial Parliament.

Many Irish Interruptions.

Being continually interrupted by Nationalist members, Sir George said he doubted whether the voice of Ireland had yet been heard in the matter. The speaker of the House appealed to the Irish members to give him a fair hearing.

Sir Charles Hobhouse, former Postmaster General, and Sir Donald MacLean criticised the bill, expressing the opinion that the number of men over 40 who were fit for service did not justify raising the age limit.

John Dillon, the Nationalist leader, said that, apart altogether from Ireland, no case had been made out for the bill itself. As to the Irish proposals, he asserted, they would destroy the hope of an Irish settlement during the war. He challenged the Government to take a plebiscite in Ireland, and said that Antrim would vote with Clare against conscription. The farmers of Ulster, he said, were against conscription.

Sir Edward Carson, interrupting, said: "No more than the farmers of England."

Dillon Predicts "New War Front."

The estimate of 400,000 men from Ireland, continued Mr. Dillon, was nonsense. Two years ago the figures were put at 120,000, and since that time 20,000 had volunteered. He believed that no more than 80,000 could be obtained without doing infinitely more injury by destroying the food supply.

The real purpose of the bill, Mr. Dillon said, was to divert public attention and inquiry from the true causes of the failure on the western front. The attempt to extend the bill to Ireland, he predicted, would open up another war front in Ireland, all the more formidable because it would be a moral front, in which Britain would be wrong; it would be a front which, whatever form the conflict took, would spread to America and Australia and to all the corners of the earth where the Irish race was scattered. The prospect before the Government, Mr. Dillon asserted, was that for the remainder of the war it must hold Ireland under strict military law, with ever-increasing bitterness.

In committee the Nationalists, Mr. Dillon said, would propose to have county option, and if the Government would concede that, perhaps they would cry quits and not oppose the bill further. He had no hope that a home rule bill acceptable to Ireland could be passed.

157 MILLION TOTAL OF LIBERTY LOAN IN THIS DISTRICT

FORMER FIGURES BEATEN

CITY'S SHARE $135,950,400

Farmers Loan and Trust Company Takes $7,223,000 and du Pont Corporation $4,000,000.

Subscriptions to the third Liberty Loan officially listed by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, total $157,097,350, according to an announcement made last night by the Publicity Department of the Liberty Loan Committee, following the receipt of advices from Washington that the Treasury Department had decided to lift the ban against the publication of subscription figures.

The total of $157,097,350 compares with $65,874,000 for a similar period in the campaign for the second Liberty Loan last October. Although it was not definitely so stated, it is understood that the total given out last night represents the aggregate of subscriptions concerning which the Bond Division of the Reserve Bank has been officially informed in accordance with the post-card system of daily reports, an arrangement under which the bank figures must necessarily be one day late. The reports received by the bank yesterday recorded subscriptions in the hands of the 1,275 reporting banks and trust companies of the district on Tuesday night, excepting perhaps some reports of local institutions which might have been forwarded by messenger.

Of the $157,097,350 in subscriptions listed by the Reserve Bank, the five boroughs of New York City are credited with $135,950,400, while the remainder of the district, which includes all of New York State, twelve northern counties of New Jersey and Fairfield County, Conn., have supplied $21,146,950.

City Takes 20 Per Cent. of Allotment.

Comparison with the quotas fixed for various portions of the district shows that New York City has thus far subscribed to about 20 per cent. of its allotment of $867,125,800, based on a total of $900,000,000 for the whole district, while the other communities have to date furnished approximately 9 per cent. of their $232,874,700 allotment.

The Borough of Brooklyn, which has a quota of $39,616,000, has already sent in subscriptions for more than 25 per cent. of that amount.

Following are the detailed figures of subscriptions credited to New York City and to the eight sub-districts which together form the Second or New York Federal Reserve District:

New York City—
Manhattan	$125,253,500
Queens	319,950
Bronx	78,900
Richmond	42,200
	$135,950,400
Sub-district—
No. 1, (Buffalo)	$309,200
No. 2, (Rochester)	1,268,750
No. 3, (Syracuse and Utica)	778,000
No. 4, (Binghamton)	618,300
No. 5, (Albany)	4,182,350
No. 6, (Long Island and Richmond)	2,116,200
No. 7, (Northern New Jersey)	9,595,900
No. 8, (Fairfield Co., Conn., Westchester and Rockland Counties, N. Y.)	2,644,500

Minimum Average Exceeded.

Despite the fact that the Treasury Department has fixed $900,000,000 as the quota for the New York District, the Liberty Loan Committee is striving to obtain subscriptions totaling $1,500,000,000, or one-half of the nation's $3,000,000,000 loan. Counting last Saturday, the four weeks' campaign runs for twenty-five business days, and consequently the daily average of subscriptions must be $60,000,000 on the basis of $1,500,000,000, and $36,000,000 if figured on $900,000,000. The former figure has not been attained, although the latter has been exceeded.

Besides the usual meetings at City Hall, Madison Square Park, the Public Library, &c., today's chief event in the Liberty Loan campaign will be a mass meeting at Carnegie Hall, where the Archbishop of York, who has made an extended tour of the United States, will deliver his farewell address. Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, will preside, and the other

British Sinkings Fall to Six; Week's Loss Next to Lowest

LONDON, April 10.—The sinkings of British merchantmen by mines or submarines reported in the last week reached the next to lowest level of any week since Germany began her intensive submarine campaign early in 1917. Four vessels of more than 1,600 tons, two of less than 1,600 tons, and two fishing boats were sunk.

The Admiralty statement adds:

"Vessels unsuccessfully attacked, eleven, including two previously. Arrivals, 2,534; sailings, 2,495.

"Both fishermen reported today were sunk during the week ended March 30."

According to a dispatch from Paris, only two French merchantmen, both over 1,600 tons, were sunk by mines or submarines during the week ended April 6.

A Rome dispatch says that one Italian steamer of more than 1,500 tons was sunk by an enemy submarine in the last week. Three small sailing vessels were also sunk.

The lowest number of British ships reported sunk in one week by submarine or mine since Feb. 1, 1917, was five, in the week of Jan. 12. Last week's total of six was equaled in the week of Nov. 11.

From a Staff Correspondent.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN FRANCE, April 10.—To the newcomer from Paris to the French Army the first impression is the extraordinary absence of what is called public opinion about the war. There are no fluctuations of attitude according as the news is good or bad, no doubt or hesitation. The army has its work to do and does it unquestioningly.

In the best sense of the word the soldiers of France are a professional army. The first thing asked of a new arrival is, "Well, how is Paris taking it?" One never thinks of the reply, "How is the army taking it?" because from the outset it is evident that the army is taking it (no matter what that implies) as part of the day's work. Forain hit the right nail when he drew his famous cartoon of a poilu saying, "We will hold, but what about the civilians?"

Throughout this battle the French Army has been perfectly calm. Men have confidence in their chiefs and in themselves. They have had difficult moments, when whole divisions have had to fight to the death, but those who are left of them are as confident as ever—supremely confident. They know that they are better than the Germans.

Before this drive there had been three great German offensives—from Charleroi to the Marne, on the Yser, and at Verdun.

In the first the French were outnumbered and outgunned, and in the second also. At Verdun the enemy, by a momentary concentration, broke down smaller forces. In all three the French bore the brunt of battle, yet they were victorious. Now they have the support of the British and the gigantic promise of America behind them, and in addition an equality of guns, materials and transport. Their one weakness, as compared with the Germans, the lack of a united command, has been repaired. They know that the end is now sure. However great Germany's effort is, it is only the "death flurry" of the harpooned leviathan.

The TIMES correspondent talked yesterday with the staff officers of a division which was thrown into the line at a moment's notice north of Nesle at the time of the heaviest German attack.

Through lack of the co-ordination, now insured by Foch's appointment they were left without supports on the right and left. For six long days and nights without sleep and worn out by the terrible fighting they stood off the attack of ten German divisions which were constantly replaced by new units, brought up to the front line by automobiles.

Thanks to the skillful use of cavalry and armored automobiles, since thirty-six of the latter held the roads until the enemy was near enough to attack with grenades without losing a single

ARMENTIERES IN DANGER

Gen. Maurice Says Its Loss, However, Would Not Be "a Vital Matter."

BERLIN, April 10, (via London.)—Six thousand prisoners and 100 guns were captured by the Germans between Armentières and La Bassée Canal, General Headquarters announced this afternoon.

The Germans have crossed the Lys River at several points between Armentières and Estaires, according to the evening statement from General Headquarters.

The statment says:

North of Armentières we penetrated the English lines on both sides of Waasten-Warenton.

Between Armentières and La Bassée Canal, after strong preparation by our artillery and mine throwers, we attacked the English and Portuguese positions. We took the first enemy lines and captured about 6,000 prisoners and 100 guns.

On the battlefield on both sides of the Somme violent artillery duels and successful infantry engagements developed.

On the southern bank of the Oise we also threw back the enemy across the Oise-Aisne Canal between Folembray and Brancourt.

ARMENTIERES SALIENT IS GREATLY MENACED

But Germans Have Gained No High Ground in Northern Attacks, Says Maurice.

LONDON, April 10.—"In the morning's attack the enemy entered the British first line trenches between the Rivers Lys and Douve," says Major Gen. F. B. Maurice, Chief Director of Military Operations, at the War Office today. "The attack extended from Armentières to Messines.

"The German gains today, in conjunction with the results of his attack yesterday, have placed Armentières in an awkward salient. Armentières is now little more than a heap of ruins, and its loss would not be a vital matter. It is not lost yet, and we hope it will not be, but it may be.

"On the Messines front the enemy's attack today was repulsed. The enemy has obtained no footing on the high ground anywhere.

"In yesterday's fighting the enemy transferred the scene of his operations to the front between Armentières and Bethune. The ground of the main attack was held in the centre by a Portuguese division, with a British division on each flank. The main blow fell on the Portuguese.

"The terrain is an absolutely flat alluvial plain, with no feature of any technical advantage, but an awkward salient has been made into our line whence the enemy may attack either Bethune in the south or Armentières in the north.

The Germans captured a considerable part of Ploegsteert Wood, [two miles and a half north of Armentières,] General Maurice said.

"In the fighting yesterday the enemy advanced in the centre to a depth of 5,500 yards," said General Maurice. "It is quite certain we lost some guns. In an advance to such a depth considerable Portuguese artillery must have been lost, and probably a number of prisoners."

In the retirement of the French to the line of the Ailette River two French battalions were cut off, and the Germans took about 2,000 prisoners, said General Maurice. The withdrawal of the French was made on account of an awkward corner in the line.

"The latest fighting," the General went on, "shows that the enemy is merely carrying out another chapter in his effort to exhaust the British Army. His first scheme was to cut off the British from the French. That failed. Now he is attacking wherever he sees a favorable chance, with the idea of bleeding us white if he can."

Americans Are Greeted With Intense Enthusiasm As They Reach British Lines After 4-Day March

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 10, (Associated Press.)—The first of the American fighting troops have arrived on the British front, and have been greeted with intense enthusiasm.

The overseas pioneers were a battalion of infantry, which came swinging along the road into a certain sector after an all-night march that began on the anniversary of America's declaration of war.

The dusty uniforms and unshaven faces of the Americans showed that they had been long on the road.

American Aviator Brought Down

AMSTERDAM, April 10.—The Germans have made their first capture of an American aviator, a semi-official Berlin dispatch reports. He is said to have been shot down on the western front on Sunday. The American aviator is described as an engineer by profession, who since September has served with the French forces.

Full Weight of Kaiser's Armies Hurled Against British Front

How the Lancashires Held the Flank and Retook Givenchy—"They Said 'Kamerad!' Just Like the Picture Papers, and I Took Ten, Though I'm Only 19"—Tragedy of the Portuguese.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, April 10.—In my message yesterday I told as much as was known of the attack against the British and Portuguese troops between Armentières and Givenchy, the strength and purpose of it being then uncertain. It is now clear that this battle, which is still in progress today, is a new and formidable offensive, with large objectives, and not merely a demonstration to withdraw the British troops from the area of the Somme.

It also is made certain by this new thrust that the German high command have decided to throw the full weight of their armies against the British in an endeavor to destroy their forces in Northern France instead of dividing their efforts by striking also at the French. I believe their plan is to edge off as much as possible from the French armies, holding them in check by defensive fighting and counterattacks in order to concentrate their masses of men and guns opposite the British lines and hurl them in a series of blows now on the right and now on the left, following up each success as far as its possibilities admit. It is a menace which calls for a supreme effort of the armies of Great Britain and her allies.

Yesterday the enemy struck north on the British left, beginning, as I have said, in the flat grounds opposite Neuve Chapelle as the centre of the thrust with Fleurbaix to the north and Givenchy to the south, and extending this morning further north still above Armentières, and including the ridge of Messines. As yesterday, so today. They succeeded in pressing back parts of the first defensive systems, and their threat this morning was most vehement in the neighborhood of Messines, although British counterattacks have since driven the enemy back part of the way.

Night of Tremendous Gun Fire.

An enormous gun fire was directed against the British positions along all this line last night again after yesterday morning's bombardment, and continued without pause through a very unquiet night, when all through the hours this tumult of great guns beat upon one's ears with continued drumfire, and all the sky was full of flame and light.

This morning again when I went up into French Flanders and through the villages which the enemy had been shelling regardless of the women and children there, this frightful, unceasing thunder was as loud as ever and told one without further news that the battle was still going on and that the Germans were extending its zone.

The great achievement of the day on the part of the British troops engaged was the magnificent stand of the 55th Division, all Lancashire troops, who held the flank firm against fierce repeated attacks by troops four times stronger than themselves in numbers, and who when the men on their left were pressed back formed a flank on their left and so withstood the enemy's hammer blows that at the end of the day and this morning the line was still unbroken there. Givenchy was still British and the enemy's waves of men lay shattered in front of them and 756 prisoners had been taken.

Portuguese Target of Great Gunfire.

It was a tragedy for the Portuguese that the heaviest bombardment in the storm of gunfire, as terrible in its fury as anything of the kind since March 21, was directed against the centre, which they held. It was annihilating to their outposts and smashed their front line defenses, which were stoutly held. It beat backwards and forwards in waves of high explosives from the trench line opposite Neuve Chapelle to the second line, opposite Fauquissart and Richebourg St. Vaast. Large numbers of heavy guns also searched behind these defense systems for crossroads, ammunition dumps, railways, villages, and headquarters, or units, while the Portuguese batteries were assailed with gas shells and flying steel.

The Portuguese front line was overwhelmed by the intensity of the bombardment, and, although some of their outposts held on, fighting gallantly to the last man, their line had to fall back to the second system. This was attacked by enemy assault troops and between six and seven in the morning they had reached Fauquissart. The barrage lifted at seven o'clock for a general attack on the second line. Here the strongest body of Portuguese troops fought stubbornly, but by eleven o'clock the Germans forced their way through to Laventie and the position round Fleurbaix was threatened.

Destroy Abandoned Guns.

They were then holding the line through Richebourg St. Vaast and Laventie, but it was difficult to make a stand here, as the Portuguese troops had by that time suffered heavily. The Portuguese field artillery served their guns as long as possible and destroyed the breech blocks whenever it became inevitable that they would have to leave a gun behind. The Portuguese gunners were attached to the British heavy batteries and behaved with special courage, firing and laying and carrying up ammunition all through the battle under dangerous shelling, and the British artillery officers report that nothing could have been better than the way they stuck to it. A battalion of their infantry also held on gallantly to Lacouture until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, when they were charged by the enemy.

The enemy advance in the centre put a severe strain upon the 55th Division, who were already sustaining terrific attacks on the right by Givenchy. Many of these Lancashire men had been in billets sleeping peacefully when the news of the battle came the night before last, and they had to turn out at once and go straight to the trenches under the abominable fire.

All of them were like the lad I met this morning in charge of German prisoners sitting on top of a ladder, with his slouch hat on the back of his head, while he told me his astounding adventures in the dialect of Warrington, and for all the world like the music hall comedian, in spite of the horrors which he had seen and now described. They must have been remarkable fellows. Oppressed as I was with the sense of tragedy, this boy's monologue, with the snarl of shrapnel as a musical accompaniment, made me laugh as he sat up there with his funny face, saying the drollest things.

They also took over 700 prisoners, whom I saw today, and a very hefty crowd of gray wolves they were. In spite of the fact that some of them

ONE DIVISION FIGHTS OFF 4

FRENCH WIN AT HANGARD

LONDON, April 10.—In heavy fighting lasting all day the British troops have been forced back by a new German attack north of Armentières to a line running through Wytschaete [five miles south of Ypres] along the Messines Ridge to Ploegsteert [about three miles north of Armentières.]

South of Armentières the Germans, after a protracted struggle in continuation of yesterday's battle, crossed the Lys River and established themselves on the left bank at a number of points east of Estaires [about seven miles southwest of Armentières] and near Bac St. Maur [about four miles southwest of Armentières.]

From Estaires southward to Givenchy, the southern limit of this latest German offensive, the British today maintained their lines. Givenchy, which was taken by the Germans yesterday, was recaptured by the British troops, with 750 German prisoners.

The night bulletin reads:

Following upon the bombardment already reported, the enemy this morning launched a fresh attack in strength against our positions between the Lys River and Armentières and the Ypres-Comines Canal. Heavy fighting has been taking place in this sector throughout the day, as well as on the whole front of yesterday's attack, north of La Bassée Canal.

North of Armentières the weight of the enemy's assaults pressed our troops back to the line Wytschaete-Messines Ridge and Ploegsteert.

Bodies of German infantry who had forced their way into Messines were driven out this morning by a counterattack.

South of Armentières the enemy succeeded after a prolonged struggle in establishing himself on the left bank of the Lys River at certain points east of Estaires and in the neighborhood of Bac St. Maur.

This morning the enemy also crossed the Lawe at Lestremh, but was counterattacked by our troops and driven out of the village and back across the river.

Between Estaires and Givenchy our positions have been maintained.

On the front north of La Bassée Canal fierce fighting continued during the night. Our troops are holding the line of the Rivers Lawe and Lys and are heavily engaged with the enemy at the river crossings at Estaires and Bac St. Maur.

On the southern flank of attack Givenchy, into which the enemy at one time forced his way, was recaptured later in the day by a successful counterattack by the Fifty-fifth Division, which took 750 prisoners in this area.

Early this morning the enemy opened a heavy bombardment of our positions east and north of Armentières, as far as the Ypres-Comines Canal. Fighting is reported to have commenced on the southern portion of this front.

On the British front south of the Somme there was local fighting yesterday evening at certain points, without changing the situation.

Airmen Hampered by Mist.

An official statement on aerial operations tonight says:

During the morning the whole front was covered with a mist, which prevented any of our airplanes leaving the ground. Later in the day, when there was a slight improvement in the weather, our machines reconnoitred the new battlefront between La Bassée and Armentières and bombed and engaged with machine gunfire the enemy's attacking troops.

Hostile low-flying machines also were active in this sector. Four of these machines were brought down by our airplanes, and one was shot down by our infantry. Two of our airplanes are missing.

Foe Used Huge Masses of Men.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 10, (Associated Press.)—The Messines Ridge and the Ploegsteert Wood, which last June were cleared of Germans by a spectacular coup, were filled again today with swirling masses of battling troops as the result of a drive launched by the enemy between Armentières and Messines.

For hours the German hordes flung themselves viciously against the defending lines, and by sheer weight of numbers forced their way forward into the British positions. Messines, Ploegsteert, and Nieppe all came within the zone of the bitter fighting during the forenoon. If the attack should succeed, Armentières would lie in a deep salient with the Germans well in on either side of it.

One of the main features of the German plans for the offensive as a whole now becomes obvious. The Kaiser is bent on annihilating the British Army, as far as is possible.

Givenchy was the pivot of the battle and the most important position along the line, for the high ground here dominates the whole Lys valley. The enemy tried to work around the place, and twice succeeded in getting into the town, but each time he was stormed out by the grimly fighting division which is holding this section of the front.

The battle in Givenchy was sanguinary. For hours the contending forces fought at close quarters with rifles and hand grenades. The nature of the British defense may be seen from the fact that one British division was being attacked by four German divisions and an extra brigade.

The German artillery fire of yesterday and today has been terrific. Great concentrations of guns have been hurling steady streams of high explosives far back of the lines, and virtually every village within reach of the long-range guns has come under the punishment.

FRENCH REPULSE FOE IN HANGARD REGION

The Village, After Repeatedly Changing Hands, Remains in Their Possession.

PARIS, April 10.—German troops last night delivered a heavy attack on the French lines near Hangard-en-Santerre, (ten miles southeast of Amiens,) which was met by a French counterattack, preventing the Germans from gaining any advantage, the War Office announced this afternoon. The village changed hands repeatedly, but early this morning the French were in complete possession of the place and the cemetery near by.

West of Castel and west of Noyon German efforts to advance failed.

The fighting near Castel (two miles southwest of Hangard) grew out of a German attempt to drive the French out of the woods there. The enemy sustained heavy losses in his repulse.

Today there was artillery fighting of considerable violence north of Montdidier and on the Oise Canal front.

The day statement reads:

The night was marked by a series of local actions begun by the Germans at several points on the front.

In the region of Hangard-en-Santerre the Germans yesterday evening delivered an attack which was preceded by strong artillery preparation.

A violent fight took place for possession of the village, which several times changed hands. About 8 o'clock in the morning a counterattack launched by French troops brought the village and cemetery into our possession.

At the same time a German attack, which was intended to drive the French out of the wood to the west of Castel, suffered a severe check.

In the region of Suzoy French troops smashed the German efforts, which increased the number of his losses without giving him any gain.

Northeast of Mont Renaud French reconnoitring parties took some prisoners and captured two machine guns.

On the left bank of the River Oise and in the region of the canal there was intermittent artillery fighting.

Northwest of Rheims the French succeeded in penetrating the enemy lines and in bringing back some prisoners.

There was great activity of both artilleries on the right bank of the Meuse, in the forest of Apremont, and in the Woevre, in the region of Flirey.

The War Office announcement tonight says:

On the front north of Montdidier and in the region of the Oise Canal artillery fighting was maintained with considerable violence. There was no infantry action.

We took about thirty prisoners in the course of engagements last night. The day was relatively calm on the rest of the front.

It is confirmed that five additional airplanes have been brought down.

OUR ENGINEERS AIDED CAREY.

LONDON, April 10.—But for the gallant defense put up by General Carey's improvised army, in which American railway engineers played a prominent part, says the correspondent on the western front of The Daily Mail, the enemy might have pushed through to Amiens in the first few days of his great attack. The improvised force held an important stretch of the front against furious German onslaughts.

"There was no doubt in anybody's mind that they would hold on grimly as long as breath remained in their bodies," says the correspondent. How the men were assembled before daylight, made up into companies and battalions by noon, and ready to march shortly afterward is told by the correspondent, who adds:

"It was not until it had been in the field for some time that the force was able to get artillery. But as soon as they had it they certainly used it to good advantage. * * * In the beginning, however, it was the men who held the enemy back with their bodies."

The sector involved began at the River Somme, near Sailly-Laurette, and extended southwest to about the Luce River.

From Lens to Arras ruin is being added to ruin. Smoky by day, rimmed in fire by night, the old battlegrounds are alive to battle again. Constant "crumping" of shells in Arras, Lievin, Acqueroivres and other big and little centres is answered by the roar of guns sweeping the enemy front, assembly and rear areas.

The Canadians wait in their trenches without fear for the future. Everywhere there is confidence that if the enemy attacks the heights his price for the assault will be terrible.

The temper of the Canadian forces is magnificent. It found repeated expression yesterday. At one point two Canadian parties raided enemy lines. The first, advancing after an artillery barrage, found the enemy outpost line deserted. It pushed on to the front line with no better success, only two of the enemy being found. They resisted and were killed.

The other party, in a stealthy raid, found the enemy in some strength and killed five and captured one. Later in the afternoon the Canadians took three more prisoners.

Early this morning, under cover of an artillery barrage, two more raids were carried out against the enemy. One raiding party had no luck, but the other, twenty-five strong, took no fewer than ten prisoners.

CANADIANS WAIT ON VIMY.

Confident That Germans Cannot Turn the Ridge from the North.

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, April 10, (Canadian Press, Limited.)—Foiled in their attempt to outflank Vimy Ridge on the south, the Germans are now attempting the same manoeuvre from the north by Bethune. The anniversary of the date that saw Canada victorious in winning back so much of the coal lands of France finds those lands menaced again. Canada, with its hard-won Vimy Ridge behind it, waits for Germany to dare a frontal attack.

All yesterday afternoon and evening and this morning the Canadian guns answered those of the enemy. Throughout the area from the Scarpe to Souchez little villages have known again the blood price of battle. Women and children are evacuating their homes. Death has visited many. War broods over the ridge.

PARIS EXPECTED NEW THRUST.

Probably Part of Original Plan of Battle, Says Hutin.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 10.—The probability of the German attack on the British front in the La Bassee-Armentieres region yesterday, had been foreshadowed by the military critics here for some days. It was regarded as unlikely that the army of the Crown Prince of Bavaria, which is well furnished with reserves and a system of communications based on Lille, would remain inactive.

Yesterday's German blow must not be regarded as a mere diversion attack, but was fully consistent with the beginning of the German attack has been on more dangerous ground. Switching their attack from the south of Armentieres to the north of the town, the Germans delivered a strong attack against the British line between Armentieres and Hollebeke, behind which is the famous Messines-Wytschaete ridge. No serious damage was done at latest reports. The British were driven in, back upon this ridge which they held at last accounts of the fighting. But if the Germans can push them back from the ridge the entire position in Flanders is threatened.

The advantage in this fighting, however, lies with the British at present. The ground in Flanders is, it will be remembered, very low and without any naturally prominent features other than the Wytschaete ridge and its extension, the Passchendaele ridge. The possession of these points is an advantage not readily exaggerated. For observation, for artillery work, the ridge is of vital importance, and was the one feature which caused the British such great trouble in both the first and the second battles of Ypres.

As long, however, as the British hold the Messines ridge, the extent of the German advance along the Lys to the west is limited. In other words this position bears the same relation to the positions west of Armentières that the ridge at Vimy bears to the line north of the Somme. An advance with this bastion on the flank, from which the British could later strike out against the base of the salient, is not possible as a military conception.

There is no indication that this is an attempt to get to the sea at another point. There is every indication, in fact, that it is not. It is, however, a gigantic attempt to clear the ground from Ypres to Montdidier of all positions which the British could use as striking points in a counter movement. To win, Germany must concentrate on one objective. She cannot scatter her efforts over this long front. Every move must be in furtherance of a single plan, otherwise the German strength will be frittered away with nothing definite accomplished in the end.

German plan to attack the British by surprise, if possible, with every possible help in the way of artillery and numbers, with the object of driving them further toward the sea in a region too remote for French aid to be readily available.

Marcel Hutin says in the Echo de Paris that the original German plan probably provided for yesterday's attack in the Armentieres-La Bassee district to have followed the fall of Amiens in order to widen still more the distance which must have separated the British and French between Amiens and Montdidier. Not having been able, thanks to Foch, either to secure Amiens or separate the two allied armies, the enemy in a desire to hasten forward the climax of the battle has been compelled to play his third act before having been able, as he had hoped, to finish the first, which was the separation of the British and French armies, and after having ruined his second, which consisted in the capture by April 2 of Amiens and Longueau.

General Otto von Below's army, in its attack on the British yesterday, was undoubtedly largely helped by the thick fog which prevailed.

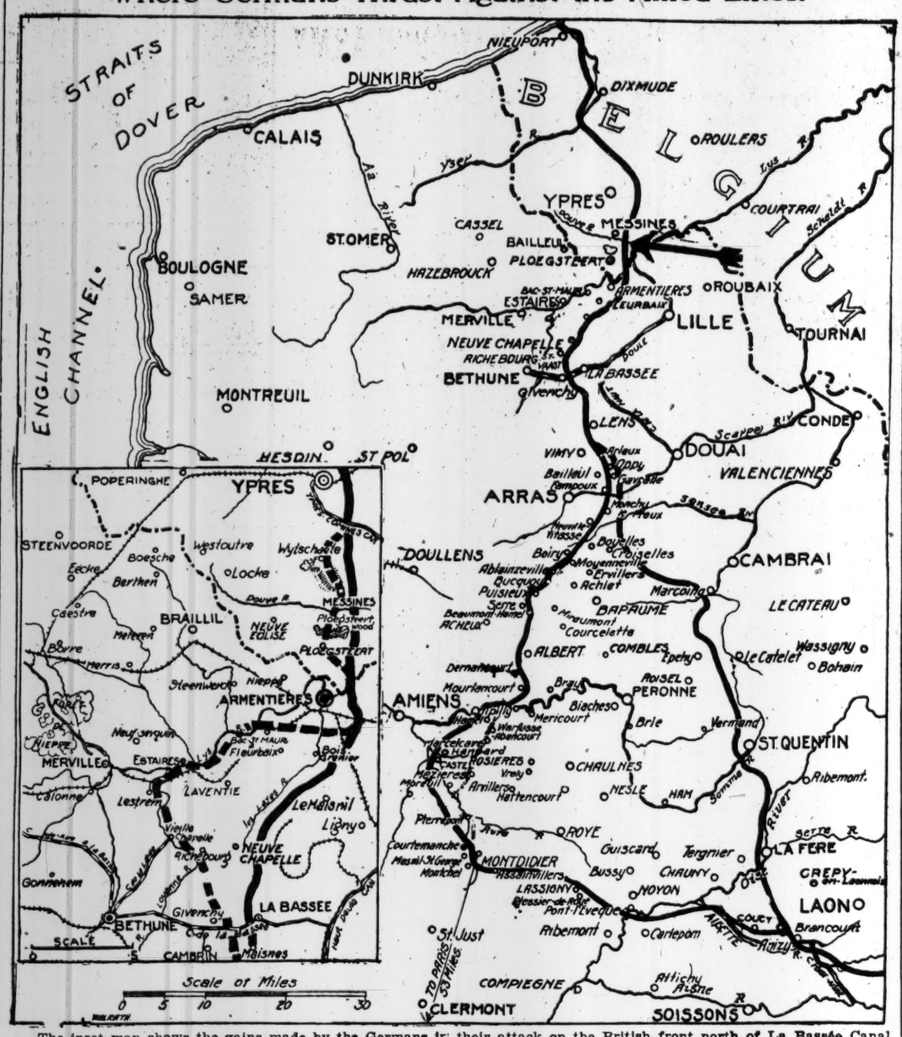

CIVILIANS OUT OF ARRAS.

Haig Removes Inhabitants, Who Lived for Three Years Under Fire.

PARIS, April 10.—The civilian population of the city of Arras has been removed. For more than three years the city, before the war a place of some 25,000 inhabitants, held out under almost continuous bombardments by the enemy's big guns. It is situated on the Scarpe, just behind the northern end of the main battlefront.

A city employe who was charged with the care of the municipal archives and was unscathed during the three years of bombardment, was killed by a shell just as he was leaving the town, after the archives had been removed.

Where Germans Thrust Against the Allied Lines.

The War Situation

Reports of the fighting in the north between La Bassée and Armentières have given a much clearer idea of the operations in this sector, and the accomplishments by both the Germans and the Allies in the first stage of the fighting. The German effort which was directed against this line had for its purpose exactly the same as that which proved successful in the opening of the battle—to break through the British defenses, indeed through the entire defensive zone, and sweep on to the heights beyond. There can be no question that if this could be done the damage would be vast. The southern line north of the Somme would be vitally affected. The hinge at Arras would be destroyed through the forced evacuation of the Vimy Ridge positions. This, as has been previously noted, is the primary object of the German plan.

The Germans find themselves cramped in the relatively narrow salient along the Avre. There is not room to spread out. Their numbers cannot be used advantageously. To attempt to increase the men per mile of line causes slaughter of their troops, and, moreover, there is a natural limit to the number of men who can be so employed. As the number of men increases the burden of the transport also increases, causing a complete block of all available routes to the front.

In addition to this, the Allies are always prepared for the attack when it comes because the Germans practically have no choice. They must attack in a very narrow area, with no possibility of concealment of their real object. For every reason it became necessary to widen the front of activity. To have an active front of a hundred miles, or even of half that distance, gives them some choice and some ability to divert attention from the real front to be attacked, which need be but a few miles long in order to force a local withdrawal if the wedge is sufficiently deep. If then the active front can be widened to include all of the line from Montdidier to Armentières, or even to Arras, Germany can attack where she pleases, create local salients, and, if the supply of men holds out, gradually encircle each place by attacks both north and south of it.

There is an additional value to be gained in this attack in the north other than Arras directly. That is the town of Bethune, some five miles west of the original line where it crosses the canal. The importance of Bethune lies in its railroad connections. It has direct rail communication with Calais by a double-track system, while from it branches radiate both along the canal feeding that section of the front and southeast to Lens. It is an important British base, supplying much of the line from Lens to Fleurbaix.

The German attack has brought the line within four miles of this base at its nearest point, which is on the Laire Canal, near the town Vieille Chappelle. The advance, however, can be accomplished only with great loss, as the country is absolutely flat, making it difficult to effect concentrations unless they are plainly visible. It is also void of defensive features, although there are several heights about Bethune which give good observation.

The Germans advanced their lines in the fighting of the first day as far as the Laire River from Vieille Chappelle northward to its junction with the Lys at Estaires and in the northern zone of attack, along the Lys as far as Bac St. Maur. This throws the battle line well to the west of Armentières and makes the village the point of a rather sharp salient. This town, however, has no value from a military standpoint. Far down in the Lys Valley, directly on the river, it has been very close to the battle lines since 1914. Any advantage which it might have possessed has been long since destroyed by artillery fire. It lies moreover on the south bank of the Lys and for the British to retire behind the river, using it as a defensive screen would indeed better their defensive power to this extent.

Yesterday the fighting spread to the north, where the situation is much more serious. In fact, no fighting since the were boys in glasses, who were under average size, the rest of them were tall, strapping fellows, and did not look cowed by their capture. Some of them had lost their way in the fog, which otherwise was to their advantage, because in some places they penetrated between Portuguese posts before they were seen. But one lot strayed hopelessly, and came into one of our communication saps.

"We did shout," said the Lancashire lad with the funny face. "Then these Johnnies put up their hands and said 'Kammerad,' just as you read in the picture papers, and I took ten of them, though I'm only 19."

Givenchy Twice Retaken.

But it wasn't comedy at all for those Lancashire men. It was grim fighting in a bad little corner of hell, for that was Givenchy yesterday; and today the enemy attacked it in crowds and captured it in the morning, in spite of a deadly rifle and machine-gun fire, from these men of the 55th Division. He was hurled out again by parties of bombers and riflemen, but returned to the attack and regained half the village. Then these Lancashire lads counterattacked once more and drove the enemy clean out and further back than where he started from.

In the hard fighting the Lancashires and Yorkshires took most of their men and these Germans were crestfallen, for before the battle a document was read out to them saying the division in front of them was not to be feared because it was very weak and very tired, and the German storm troops would be attacking in the proportion of three regiments to six British companies and would have no trouble.

On the left, beyond the flank of the 55th Division the situation was more serious, and parties of the enemy crossed the river Lys and got into the neighborhood of Croix du Bac and to the outskirts of Estaires. They apparently were not in big numbers there and this morning were driven back over the Lys.

In the centre when the Portuguese were forced to fall back the weight of the German attack then fell on the British troops, who fought magnificent defensive actions. Counterattacks were also made with the greatest gallantry near another place called Huit Maisons. Some of the men held out in an outpost for many hours and kept the enemy back by their fire.

From captured maps and other information it is proved that the enemy had the most ambitious objects yesterday which should have brought him to the outskirts of Bethune on the canal bank, but owing to the brave fighting of the British he was unable to achieve this purpose.

Two German aviators were brought down in the British lines today.

Yesterday's battle was only the beginning of a great attempt in the north on a twenty-five-mile front. This is borne out by an extension of the attack today above Armentières and up by Messines Ridge. Of that most northerly attack I know as yet little, because I was in the region further south this morning

GERMANS WASTING MEN ON OISE FRONT

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Wednesday, April 10.—There is something curious, almost to the point of the comic, in the German advance on the east of the Oise up to the region of the Ailette and the Oise-Aisne Canal.

I have explained that this protruding corner of the French front was not tenable because there was no room for the deployment of any considerable body of troops, and because it lay between the marshes and forest block of St. Gobain, held by the enemy. It was a salient of very little value, the abandonment of which was early decided upon. Advance guards were, however, maintained from Barisis to the river, with instructions to fall back slowly to the new line, which would be firmly held, making the enemy pay as heavily as possible for every mile of ground. This program has been carried out exactly.

The odd thing is that the German attack of April 6 was not made by a skirmishing force, but that five divisions, or about 60,000 combatants, were poured into a space which broadens from three to only about six miles at the base of the triangle.

I can see only one explanation of this needless demonstration. The German people are already disillusioned. They ask what has been gained for so much slaughter. Von Hutier was at a standstill on the Avre. Here, at least, was a chance for cheap newspaper display. The occupation of the Sinceny-Barisis sector was therefore represented as a victorious battle. The only other possible explanation is that the enemy completely miscalculated his task; but to put more men into such a job than are required is simply to increase casualties.

There is, by the way, reason to believe that the German people are disillusioned on the east as well as the west front. They are not getting what they expected to get out of Russia. The last crops have been to a large extent destroyed or dissipated, and in other ways Germany is paying for the anarchy its agents helped to create.

An enemy attack at Hill 344, near Verdun, on Sunday, was conducted by a body of about 1,000 men, acting in five deep columns on a front of nearly a mile. It got no further than the first French line, and suffered heavy losses, including three officers and thirty men captured.

Statements made by prisoners are very poor evidence, but some of them may be mentioned for what they may be worth. One is that the German command does not believe in using specialist grenadiers or grenade riflemen in a war of movement because of the difficulty of keeping them supplied with bombs.

Splendid Service of Allied Airmen.

The effectiveness of the work of the British machine gunners during the retreat has been frequently admitted. A captured aviator attributes the momentary suspension of Gotha raids on London to the disproportion between the results obtained and the losses suffered either during the raids or in landing on the return. Another traces it to the requirements of the offensive; but, except at the beginning, when they kept up with the advance and reported pretty well on the whereabouts of the retreating troops, the German airmen have certainly not shone, whereas the feats of the allied aviators are so numerous, and in some cases so romantic, that it is difficult to do justice to them.

I was talking yesterday to a boy of 22 who in a halting, ineffectual way narrated a series of thrilling adventures. He had followed most of the retreat, descending every now and then to fifty or sixty feet to empty a belt of cartridges on a German column, and was at last brought down between the German and French lines on the Avre, with his machine riddled with bullets, and had to run for it.

A better explanation than the German prisoner's of the absence of raiders from London of late is probably to be found in the extreme daring and success of the French and British bombardment squadrons. Many illustrations of the effectiveness of their raids on aviation grounds and other military works behind the German front could be given

A peculiarly satisfactory instance is that of a French expedition which threw many tons of projectiles on the aviation ground of Frascaty, near Metz, and the poison gas factory at Ludwigshafen-Mannheim, the largest of its kind. A prisoner says that at Frascaty a great hangar was destroyed with seventeen airplanes. As for the Soda Anilin Fabrik at Mannheim, its manager has admitted in Switzerland that it was almost completely destroyed, and that the gas manufacture was altogether suspended.

I am informed that different kinds of evidence obtained on other parts of the French front show that the German command expected as the result of the offensive not only a retreat more considerable and more rapid than that which occurred in the region of the attack, but also a substantial withdrawal of the French lines lying to the east.

In the middle of March the German armies consisted of 4,000,000 men at the front, 1,800,000 on the lines of communication and in the interior, and others who can be added to the present effectives.

GERMANS TO ATTEMPT TO RETAKE JERUSALEM

AMSTERDAM, April 10.—Liept. Gen. Baron von Ardinne, a military writer, in an article in the Düsseldorf Nachrichten says:

"The tide is about to turn in Syria and Palestine. With the Turkish victory near Es-Salt the recapture of Jerusalem has become a practical possibility.

"It is a satisfaction to us Germans that the struggle for the holy places is again proceeding with German arms, as in the time of the Kaiser at Barbarossa."

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 10.—Cadet Elam A. Ankrum, 24 years old, of Champaign, Ill., was instantly killed and Cadet George S. Douglas of Marysville, Kan., was perhaps fatally injured when airplanes, which they were driving were in collision at Kelly Field Aviation Camp, at a height of 250 feet, at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

TEUTON SPIRIT OF CONQUEST RISING

WANT ORE MINES RETAINED

FEAR OF EXCLUSION HERE

Belief in Germany That America Will Shut Off Raw Material Supply.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 10.—There has been a marked change among the German political leaders who passed the famous Reichstag peace resolution, and apparently the Socialist Party as such has been unable to withstand the pressure of German labor opinion, which for some months has repeatedly given voice to its anger over the unconciliatory spirit of the Entente Powers.

According to information received by THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, men who a few months ago would not listen to any annexation plans admit today that compensation in some form must be exacted by a "victorious Germany." They justify this change of opinion by reminding the people that Dr. Hertling and Count Czernin have both stated repeatedly that if Germany's peace offers were disregarded by the enemy the Central Powers would not feel pledged to peace without compensations and annexations.

Much of this change in the public mind has been brought about by the menace of a commercial and industrial war after the world war, and in this respect America's attitude probably has been most effective. The people take it for granted that the Central Powers will end the war victoriously in a military way.

"But what will be the situation between us and America afterward?" they ask. This question is asked not only in the industrial centres, but even oftener on the sea coast, and the general opinion is that America will use every effort to harm German interests, especially by barring Germany from all the raw products that Germany bought from America before the war. Mercantile and industrial circles are busy making plans to forestall the danger of a boycott after the war. The press publishes daily articles dealing with these problems. They say: "If America sells us no cotton, she shall get no potash, which is a fertilizer almost indispensable to impoverished agricultural land. Germany has a world monopoly of potash. If America gives us no petrol and no grain she shall get no dye materials, no drugs, no glassware, no optical instruments and nothing else that Germany has exported to the United States in the past.

In Dark As to Our Real Needs.

"It is as yet not known to Germany to what extent the United States will depend upon such imports after the war, but it is generally assumed that none of the other belligerents nor any neutral country will be able to take Germany's place as a producer of all the goods America used to buy from Germany.

The Deutsche Zeitung makes the point that if America expects her industries to continue prosperous after the war she must encourage immigration, but says that because of the European war there will be none, and on the contrary a large emigration from the United States to Europe, especially to Germany. Thus the Zeitung argues, the United States can not afford to conduct a commercial war with Germany.

Professor Troelsch says commerce and industry will find themselves seriously handicapped after the war. Although heretofore one of the most indefatigable champions of a peace of conciliation without annexations, he now publishes an article in the Muenchener Neueste Nachrichten, in which he says:

"As Briey and Belfort appear in quite a different light today, so does the question of Belgium. Here we must demand an eye for an eye, and one necessity must count against another. It would never do for us to play general benefactor."

What Professor Troelsch only alludes to is openly demanded by Germany's captains of industry, who insist that Briey and Longwy, besides a strip of French land wide enough to protect the iron mines from hostile guns in any future war, be incorporated into the German Empire.

Borsig, chief of the famous house of August Borsig, writes in the Vossische Zeitung that the menace of economical war after the war, as decided on by the Paris conference, has made it imperative for German industry to seek independent sources of raw products.

The Paris conference is merely used as an excuse to air the annexationist desires, which, however, are now no longer cloaked.

Wants Ore Deposits Secured.

"The deposits of iron ore in Longwy and Briey," Borsig says, "would make us quite independent of any importation of raw material. We could spare even the Swedish ore. Even if we were to treat France leniently and generously leave her in possession of those districts we have no security that she will serve us likewise.

"The iron industry is a wonderful, great tree in the midst of the field of the German industry. Its roots are the supply of raw products, its trunk the iron mills and steel works, upon which spread flourishing branches of many-sided industry. During the war it has been very difficult to keep this splendid tree alive, for half its roots extend to foreign countries. This tree has been growing close to the German border line. If we want to secure it we must take enough territory to make sure that in the future its roots need not wander beyond the German frontier."

"A country like Germany, surrounded on all sides by enemies," he says, "must look for independent supplies of raw products if it wants to keep alive. Our whole development of traffic, railways, and navigation depends on the iron industry, also our means of conducting war, if necessary. Certain persons think we might rely on foreign countries for our supply of iron ore, as before 1914. But this war has taught us another lesson.

"Besides many other imports, we lost our supply from Spain, France, Russia, North Africa, Newfoundland, Greece, and British India completely, and also a good part of our imports from the Scandinavian countries, so that our iron production was reduced from 19,000,000 to 13,000,000 tons yearly. After the war we must reckon with sharp competition in neutral countries which have improved their iron industries during the war. Iron ore may cost four times more than before the war.

"In order to remove the mines of Lorraine and Luxemburg from the reach of French guns we must claim that narrow strip that formerly belonged to Germany for a period of 900 years—Nancy, Briey, Longwy. France is the richest iron country in Europe. She will have 7,000,000,000 tons of raw product left, against Germany's 6,000,000,000, even after we have acquired the district described above."

Director General Voegler of the Deutschluxemburgische Bergwerks and Huetten Gesellschaft, calls attention to the fact that even before the war most of the mines in the Briey and Longwy districts had passed into German possession. Frenchmen having been used as straw men in their acquisition.

Impressed by Wilson's "Force."

The fact that President Wilson, in his recent Baltimore speech, gave prominence to his use of the word "force" impressed the German press, for most of the papers use his word in their headlines.

The Cologne Volkszeitung calls Mr. Wilson the "force politician." It declares the speech worthless as a historical document, and says it was meant only to have a political and psychological effect on the Americans. Mr. Wilson, the paper asserts, has not been overcareful about keeping to the truth, as he is only considering immediate results.

"He is now the business procurist of the big American world-war business," says the Volkszeitung, "the Wall Street commissioner and representative of the ever-increasingly great American financial interests and the exponent of the war profiteering trust. This he was from the beginning, and he will remain true to the role to the end. It would go badly with him if he tried to resist the pressure put on him by the group of New York billionaires."

The paper scoffs at Mr. Wilson for continuing to talk of ideals and says that when people remember the notes of the period of "neutrality" it is difficult to recognize the thoughtful, philosophical clergyman's son who now cries "Force, Force to the utmost!" but that only the tactics have changed and not the policy. It is contended that while Mr. Wilson talks of fighting for freedom, he is really fighting for the large sums invested in the war, as America's debtors must not go bankrupt. The paper asserts that the Americans will continue to throw good money after bad and that the public will have President Wilson to thank later on when the money is lost.

PLAN TO THROW OFF YOKE OF AUSTRIA

Representatives of Oppressed Nationalities Under Hapsburg Rule Meet in Rome.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, April 10.—What four years ago seemed impossible became today, under pressure of events, an accomplished fact. Delegates of all the nationalities oppressed by Austria, viz., Bohemians, Slavs, Jugoslavs, Rumanians, Italians, Poles, &c., met in the Capitol under the Presidency of former Minister and Senator Ruffini, with prominent Italian and French politicians, such as former Ministers Martini and Barzilai and MM. Franklin Bouillon and Albert Thomas. The meeting agreed on measures, the nature of which was not disclosed, to free the oppressed nationalities from the Austrian yoke.

It is difficult to explain the capital importance of this meeting, which is understood here among persons who for years saw with deepest regret all these nationalities at daggers drawn. The Poles joined the movement with great enthusiasm, but had a special declaration approved by the meeting, saying that their problems concerned Germany in even greater measure than Austria, they will, however, eagerly fight Austria, which they consider Germany's tool.

The newspaper Epoca hopes the discussion at this meeting will have a special effect on America, which, owing to distance and the diametrically opposite conditions obtaining here, can not imagine the true state of affairs from which the oppressed nationalities under Austria are suffering.

CONGRESS TO RUSH OUR OWN DRAFT BILL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The statement of Premier Lloyd George, in Commons yesterday, that American troops are an essential factor in holding the western line, was received in Congress today with great interest. It will form the topic of debate tomorrow when the War Department's amendments to the existing draft laws, declared necessary by the department for the second call of men, comes up for debate.

Unanimous consent was given just before adjournment tonight that these changes would be taken up tomorrow, displacing the Rivers and Harbors bill, and be kept before the House to the exclusion of all other business until finished. Representative Madden of Illinois, consenting to this arrangement for the Republicans, called the measure the most important matter before the American people. It seemed certain tonight that these changes, over which a sharp fight had been threatened, will go through without serious difficulty.

Representative Kahn of California, ranking Republican on the Military Affairs Committee, said today:

"It is my firm opinion, and I shall tell the House tomorrow, that the best the Allies can do is to hold the western line, and that it will be Americans who will give the final momentum necessary to a successful offensive.

"I am very hopeful that when Secretary Baker returns from France, he will bring with him plans for a vastly increased military establishment. A few months ago, when I told him that the United States should have 5,000,000 men in arms, he threw up his hands. I imagine he hasn't that same attitude now. To win this war, we must outnumber and outfight the Germans on the Western front."

Representative Shallenberger of Nebraska, a member of the Military Affairs Committee, who opposed the draft, said today after reading Lloyd George's speech that he thought the United States would be forced to conscript all men for service up to 40 years of age. Tomorrow he will oppose the War Department's proposal that no men except those in class 1 of registrants shall be called into active service.

One result of the Lloyd George statement was that Representative Kitchin, Democratic floor leader, who had been counted on to oppose the War Department's draft bill, announced that he would support it.

tary age to 50 would result in the increased military efficiency expected. He thought it more probable that, owing to the resulting dislocation in industry, it would cause a diminution in the sum total of the available national effort for the conduct of the war.

Dealing with Ireland, Mr. Asquith said that the question whether compulsory service, when it was proposed for Great Britain, should be extended to Ireland had already been twice considered by the late Government, and on both occasions had been deliberately rejected.

The test to be applied was always whether the advantages would be greater than the disadvantages. It was purely a practical question. He thought that the argument against compulsion in Ireland had been strengthened rather than weakened by the time that had elapsed since it was last considered.

The Government was introducing a large measure of self-government for Ireland, Mr. Asquith said, and he hoped that the measure would be received with something like general assent.

There were both constitutional and revolutionary movements in Ireland, Mr. Asquith went on. The evidence showed that the latter was waning, but it was not stamped out. It still existed, and had to be reckoned with. He suggested that the Government would be guilty of terrible short-sightedness, at a time when the Irish Convention had completed its labors, and when it was asking the House to accept a far-reaching measure of self-government, in imposing on Ireland compulsion which was obnoxious to a very large number of the Irish people. It was all-important that unnecessary domestic controversy should be avoided, and that a united and unbroken front should be presented to the people, the Allies and the world.

Bonar Law Tells of Emergency.

Andrew Bonar Law, spokesman for the Government, said that what had happened in France was unexpected. That was why this bill was presented.

"It is useless to conceal from ourselves the real position," he said. "Until the battle began the balance of forces was not against the Allies on the western front. Not only the Government, but the British and French military advisers, believed that there was no danger of anything fatal happening. Wherever the fault lies, it does not relieve the necessity of filling the ranks in the army, unless we are prepared to accept the position that we cannot win.

"We have been able to fill the wastage in the battle thus far, but according to the figures of the casualties available, the most critical time is likely to arise at the end of May and June. We have succeeded to some extent in meeting the difficulty by what the Americans have done. We cannot put too high our admiration of President Wilson's action in this matter in brigading the American troops. Nothing but absolute necessity could have justified our making such a demand or President Wilson's acceding to it."

Using Four Months Men.

There were still eight months at least of this campaign left, Mr. Bonar Law continued, and if the struggle went on, as the Government believed it would, the men conscripted now would become available just at the time they were needed. The Government had already put in men of four months or less training, and must face the economic risk, confronted as it was by a greater risk.

"What we are doing now," he said, "might mean the difference between victory and defeat."

With regard to Ireland, the Government did not contemplate without reluctance or hesitation doing anything which threatened to make Ireland England's enemy. It ought not to be so. The Government was asking Ireland to do nothing which was not asked from the citizens of every belligerent country, and the fact that it was delayed proved that the Government had been anxious to deal honorably and fairly with Ireland.

"We acted only after mature consideration," said Mr. Bonar Law, "and we are not going to alter our decision. If this clause is rejected it will be wiser to reject the whole bill. If the country thinks we are making a mistake we will do our utmost loyally to support any other Government which carries on the war."

Colonel Martin Archer-Shee wanted to know if it was a fact that six weeks ago the American Government offered to recruit in the United States for the British Army, and if that offer was refused. If so, would the Government reconsider the decision and ask the Americans to take the step now.

Irish Howl Down Geddes.

After Captain William A. Redmond had spoken against the Government measure, a sensational scene arose in the House. Leif Jones, Liberal for Nottinghamshire, demanded on whose advice the Government was acting in deciding to conscript Ireland. Sir Auckland Geddes, Minister of Recruiting, rose to address the House, but the Nationalist members shouted for Chief Secretary Duke to speak.

Sir Auckland tried to speak, but his voice was drowned by shouts of: "Duke!" "Duke!" The Speaker of the House appealed for order, whereupon Joseph Devlin excitedly demanded to know where the Irish Government stood in the matter. The disorders continued, Sir Auckland Geddes vainly trying to get a hearing. The Speaker again intervened aid said that, although some members were anxious to hear the Chief Secretary, others wanted to hear Geddes.

This failing to quiet the commotion, the Speaker appealed to the House for a third time and said that, if a certain number of members were determined that Geddes should not be heard, that was a game two parties could play at. He strongly deprecated the attempt to shout down the Minister or Recruiting.

John Dillon appealed to his friends to allow Sir Auckland a hearing, and Andrew Bonar Law eventually promised that Mr. Duke should participate in the discussion of the Irish clause. Sir Auckland Geddes was then allowed to speak. He gave some explanations on details of the bill and strongly emphasized its urgency from a military viewpoint.

Closure was applied and carried by a vote of 319 to 105, and an amendment by Sir Charles Hobhouse, declaring that "while recognizing the gravity of the military situation, the House is of opinion that the measure diminishes the naval and economic power of the nation without adding commensurate military strength," was defeated by a vote of 321 to 106. The bill was then passed to second reading.

BONAR LAW STANDS FIRM.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, April 11.—The Daily Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondent writes:

"After last (Wednesday) night's debate on the second reading of the new Military Service bill, the country is faced with the possibility of a grave political crisis developing in the next few days. Some of the provisions in the bill were severely criticised during the debate, notably by Sir Donald MacLean, who spoke with all the authority that belongs to him as Chairman of the most important draft appeal tribunal in the country. John Dillon solemnly warned the Government of the danger they were running of creating a new battlefront in Ireland, and Mr. Asquith earnestly counseled against extension of the military service act to that country.

"The ex-Prime Minister was critical of other points in the bill. He spoke with great energy and under an overwhelming sense of responsibility, avoiding merely controversial points and betraying not a trace of partisanship. The great majority of the House seemed to be in sympathy with Mr. Asquith, and when he sat down he received a veritable ovation.

"It was in a crowded house in this mood, at once tense and critical, that Bonar Law rose at 6:35 o'clock. He spoke for an hour without the aid of a single note. As a debating effort his speech was a tour de force. His arguments marched in orderly procession.

"Every phase of the bill was discussed. Even when his spirit was hard and unyielding his manner was fair and courteous. Never has he spoken with more power or with an accent of firmer conviction.

"The feature above all others that stood out in the speech was that frank invitation to the House to change the Government if it did not like the bill. Bonar Law was not very malleable on the question of the new age limits for military service, but in regard to the extension of conscription to Ireland he was as unyielding as a block of marble. On this point the Cabinet mean to stand or fall.

"'The application of the military service act to Ireland is not,' he said, 'with us a pious opinion; we nitend to carry it out.'

"He went on to say that there was no subject on which the House of Commons was more entitled to pronounce its judgment than this one. 'If the House thinks we are wrong, somebody else must carry on the Government,' he asserted. He disclaimed the idea of using this language as a threat. He only desired to make it plain that on this matter of Ireland the Cabinet were not going to alter their decision.

"He even invited the House to pronounce for or against the Government by a decision on the second reading, without waiting for the committee stage, when the clause dealing with Ireland is reached. It was a direct challenge, so bold and overpowering that for the moment it took everybody aback, but boldness in adhering to rash causes has often led to dangerous embarrassments for a Government."

"The initiative is now with Asquith. He could not, of course, oppose the second reading, but if during the committee stage he chose to accept Bonar Law's challenge by moving or supporting an amendment for the exclusion of Ireland a critical political situation would arise."

'INSANE,' SAYS T. P. O'CONNOR.

Irish Leader Cables "Solemn Warning" to Dillon.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 10.—Application in Ireland of military conscription would be an "insane blunder," according to a cablegram sent today to John Dillon, leader of the Irish Party in Parliament, by T. P. O'Connor, Irish publicist and member of Parliament, who is here on a speaking tour. The message read:

"I must at once record a solemn warning that conscription in Ireland will paralyze its friends and encourage its bitterest enemies in this country. This insane blunder would again render futile the best efforts of Irish leaders everywhere."

LONDON PRESS FEARS EFFECT IN IRELAND

Divided Over Wisdom of Draft Plan, Though Emphasizing Need of More Man Power.

LONDON, April 10.—The general tone of the comment in most of the London newspapers on Premier Lloyd George's proposal of conscription for Ireland reflects serious apprehension of the effect on the Irish people. The evening papers, except The Globe, which is pro-Ulster, either oppose the bill or express grave doubts as to the effect of an attempt to enforce it. While a majority of the morning papers agree with the principle of the measure, several of them dwell upon the need of caution in dealing with Ireland at this time.

The Westminster Gazette, while maintaining reserve on the man-power bill as applied to Great Britain, says that the proposals regarding Ireland have increased Irish uneasiness.

"We are at war, and we cannot wish to add acute troubles in Ireland to our other difficulties," says this newspaper.

It expresses regret that the Irish Nationalists were not consulted and that Premier Lloyd George is "flying into the teeth of a unanimous report signed equally by the Unionists and Nationalists of the Committee of the Irish Convention appointed to consider the relations between the military service and the Irish Government."

The Gazette thinks that the Premier, by declaring for conscription to be imposed upon Ireland no matter what happens to the Home Rule proposition, risks the failure of both measures, between the Nationalists who may object to the one and the Unionists who may object to the other. It suggests that this portion of the bill be reshaped and that "we be saved acute trouble with Ireland for a military reinforcement which may easily, if this method be pursued, turn out on the balance to be a minus quantity."

Views Outlook with Anxiety.

The Evening Standard, after expressing the hope that the Government will do its best to minimize the disturbance to the national life due to the partial mobilization of men up to 50 years of age, says that it is undoubtedly only just that Ireland should do her part, "but when we come to the question of compulsion there are considerations which make us regard with considerable anxiety the situation foreshadowed in last night's debate."

Charging the Government with having "weakly and foolishly permitted anti-British, pro-German propaganda in Ireland," the Standard adds that, much as it regrets this, "it is clear that Ireland is in a false position as regards the rest of the civilized world so long as she refuses to play her full part in the war."

The Star takes the Premier to task for having, as it alleges, failed to read the report of the Irish convention before making his proposal.

The Daily Mail says that the choice which is now being made is between victory and defeat, adding:

"No faintheartedness of the survivors must make the sacrifice of our dead in vain."

There is no other course than that proposed, it adds, "as Russia has failed us and the United States has not been able to send us armies in time." The paper says that Irishmen cannot be excluded when men of 50 in England are being called up for service.

The Daily News agrees that whatever steps will further the prosecution of the war must be adopted, but says:

"In striking a balance we must satisfy ourselves that the gain will be more than the loss."

The paper then deals with the Irish proposal, which, it says, seems like "midsummer madness," adding:

"For every battalion it brings us it will mean the loss of two needed to hold in check an indignant people stung once more into open rebellion."

Called Obvious Justice.

No Government measure, The Times says, has ever had a background more grim or a justification more imperative. The Times adds:

"We shall certainly not attempt, especially in the light of the latest news from France, to prejudge the attitude which the Nationalist members may ultimately adopt toward this obvious measure of justice to the rest of the United Kingdom and to the Irishmen of Canada and the United States."

The Morning Post rejoices that the Premier and his colleagues have resolved on a "straight, just and courageous policy" toward Ireland, but says that the proposal to introduce a measure of home rule in Ireland is unwise and unjust, as it is an attempt to conciliate the irreconcilables.

Premier Lloyd George, says The Daily Express, undoubtedly was voicing British opinion when he declared that it was intolerable that young Irishmen should be left "to prosper and riot" when British manhood was mobilized for military service.

The Manchester Guardian considers that from the Premier's statement a case for raising the military age in Great Britain has not been made out. Assuming that the Germans have made up their minds either to succumb or triumph as a consequence of the present offensive, the newspaper says, that particular issue will be settled in one way or the other before the men of 40 and 50 are trained. The paper asks whether it is worth while to disorganize the business of the country for the sake of 70,000 or 100,000 men six months hence.

The Guardian believes that American reinforcements will turn the balance, and finds it impossible to regard the raising of the age for service as a real contribution to the military problem. As for conscription in Ireland, it calls this "the gravest decision announced in the Premier's speech, and the one with the smallest attempt at justification.

WAR NEWS HELPS PREMIER.

Critics Stilled by Grave Situation—Home Rule Plan Is Vital.

LONDON, April 10.—Factors which governed the recent crisis over the removal of General Sir William Robertson as Chief of the General Staff still seem to control the political situation. The Lloyd George Government has again challenged the House of Commons to accept its man-power policy or provide another Government.

Since no Parliamentary section appears ready to take the Government responsibility, the indications are, as shown by today's debate, that the Government will carry the day, despite the evidence that the new proposals meet with widespread criticism. Moreover, the news from the front today, showing the continued gravity of the military situation, is helping the Ministers in their new campaign.

Ireland and the attitude of the Nationalists remains an unknown factor, but John Dillon at the end of his speech seemed to indicate a possible means of agreeing with the Government. Until the Government proposals on the projected home rule measure become known, nothing can be predicted with any certainty.

ANGRY PROTESTS IN IRELAND.

Freeman's Journal Says That the Government Has "Gone Mad."

DUBLIN, April 10.—Commenting on Premier Lloyd George's proposal of conscription for Ireland, the Irish Independent says:

"The bases of the Government's policy are so apparent that all its intentions are suspected. No Ministry that has ever ruled Ireland since the penal days has more justly incurred the execrations of a people whose liberties are sacrificed to mean expediency."

The Freeman's Journal says: "The Government has gone mad. Lloyd George, the quondam Boer champion, announced the decision yesterday to carry the war into Ireland. Every one in Ireland knows what the result will be. The only supporters in Ireland of forcible conscription of Irishmen for the war are those who want to see Ireland reduced to a welter of confusion, in order that their own reactionary views may prevail."

The Irish Times says:

"We are sure the Government did not reach its decision without having made its plans to overcome, if it cannot propitiate, the resistance which may be offered from Ireland. Only one thing could be more unfortunate than the total exemption of this country from compulsory service—the enactment of compulsion and subsequent hesitation to enforce it in the face of lawless and disloyal threats."

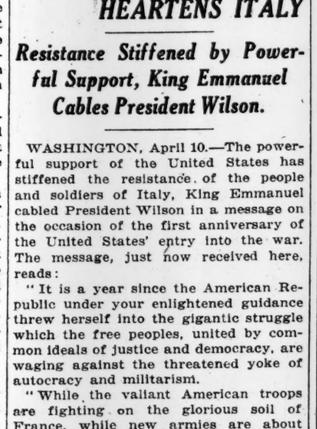

SAYS AMERICA HEARTENS ITALY

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The powerful support of the United States has stiffened the resistance of the people and soldiers of Italy, King Emmanuel cabled President Wilson in a message on the occasion of the first anniversary of the United States' entry into the war. The message, just now received here, reads:

"It is a year since the American Republic under your enlightened guidance threw herself into the gigantic struggle which the free peoples, united by common ideals of justice and democracy, are waging against the threatened yoke of autocracy and militarism.

"While the valiant American troops are fighting on the glorious soil of France, while new armies are about to cross the ocean, the powerful support of the United States stiffens the resistance of the people and the soldiers of Italy. Full of faith in the justice of the common cause and in the righteousness of the Italian national aspirations, the soldiers of Italy await confidently the enemy's offensive. On this eventful anniversary they send with me their greetings to you and to the American Army."

CALM CONFIDENCE IN FRENCH ARMY

unit, the General commanding was able to retreat step by step until relieved.

At Roye he learned that the troops on the left were unable to withstand pressure. He set off alone for the front line and personally led his men to a victorious counterattack. Their forces dwindled continually until divisional instruction units and schools of half-recovered wounded and engineers were fighting in the front line. Yet the officers of the cut-off division described the whole thus: "At the end we had the impression that the German blood had reached its high-water mark. "They did not seem to want to attack any more," was the laconic phrase used of the ultimate failure of the attempt of 100,000 men to break 10,000.

That is what I mean by saying that the French Army is professional. It possesses to the utmost degree that dispassionate judgment which marks efficient business all the world over and which refuses to be influenced by the incidentals, however unpleasant these are to individuals, in their consideration of big affairs.

It must not be thought that this means that the French lack humanity or tenderness. On the table of those very staff officers was a bunch of Spring flowers, and the new graves that were being dug daily nearer the front are decked with flowers also.

Tears came into an officer's eyes as he described the heroism of one of his comrades, who was decorated with the Legion of Honor on the battlefield for serving a mitrailleuse all alone to permit his section's withdrawal. He added, "What was finer still in my opinion was that he carried men wounded, while serving his piece, to shelter on his own shoulder. It was only when the others had to retreat that he himself began firing. By a miracle he escaped slightly wounded."

In another sector a Sergeant today told me how with seventy comrades he repelled the assaults, ten times repeated, of a German battalion on Mont Renaud. He concluded, smiling:

"We were sorry to be relieved because most of my men come from the invaded districts and had not had a chance to kill so many boches before."

This same Sergeant had a homeless puppy in his dugout and talked proudly of a thrush which he had trained to whistle patriotic airs and taken back to his mother in Paris.

In short, the French soldiers from highest to lowest are doing the work they know must be done. Their officers have been trained to war during the last forty years and are equal to every emergency.

But the French Army has full reliance upon the British also. The French know enough to make allowances and have great faith in the bulldog tenacity of the Britons. They have even greater faith in America.

"When will the Americans be here?" "How many Americans are there in France?" are the questions asked in every front line sector of the present battle.

France is putting her trust in America. It is our duty to see that France is not disappointed.

Where They Fought Hand to Hand.

THE TIMES correspondent has visited one of the less active sectors of the great battle—between Lassigny and Noyon. The configuration of the ground resembled the country above Long Island Sound in Connecticut—low, wooded hills with steep sides, broken by occasional stretches of valley.

The weather was dull and clouded, which hampered the view but permitted me to overlook the German position from hill tops instead of being compelled to peer through narrow slits of observation posts under pain of being sniped or treated to a shell burst by the enemy. On the right the tower of Noyon Cathedral was easily visible, and on the left were the hills toward Lassigny. In the valley below the opposing front lines were established.

A boyish officer of a regiment holding the sector, who explained with pride that despite the battle on Mont Renaud the previous week against ten times their number his comrades had been allowed to stay in the front line, declared that while they did not expect a boche attack in force at that point, because the defensive position was too strong, yet infantry activity, especially at night, was incessant.

Of what the artillery was doing I had unceasing evidence. The roar of explosions—French "departs" and boche "arrivals"—was tremendous. The officer said:

"It can hardly be said that the trenches are yet fully established. All night long patrols go out from both sides and fight hand to hand, or rather knife to knife, for both dare not fire lest they bring down a hail of quick-firer bullets, in swampy brushwood bordering the Divette rivulet down there. Now and then even in daytime the Germans attempt a sudden attack with half a battalion or so. Word comes to our batteries before they have hardly started, and at once a storm of 75 shells drives them back.

"Unless my study of American military history is faulty, the geographical position is much the same as at the battle of Chickamauga, where, as here, there was abundant cover for advancing troops. But we have the aid of telephones in repelling attacks and, above all, 75s, which upset the Germans even worse than quickfirers. We can check all of his attempts, and at night our patrols often get close enough to drop grenades upon them.

"Your fellows would have an opportunity to 'hunt big game' without risk of trouble. Tell them we are waiting for them eagerly, and they will have good sport when they come."

ADVOCATES ONE POWER IN CENTRAL EUROPE

Professor Nauman Would Unite Germany and Austria in Common Policy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 10.—Professor Nauman, the famous exponent of the Mitteleuropa scheme, makes a special appeal in the Vossische Zeitung that Germany and Austria-Hungary contract a binding agreement immediately involving a mutual foreign policy as well as an economical and military one. The writer argues that only through the formation of a united Central European power can real security of frontiers be attained, and that Poland will only be subdued when confronted with this. The Brest-Litovsk treaties, he says, should lead to other agreements.

Professor Nauman advocates Central European Ministers, officials, Consuls, shipping industry, and railroads, as well as foreign policy.

"Now is the time for this deed," he concludes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 10.—The famous Bunzen Society today awarded its gold medal to Dr. Ingeneer Boach and Professor Haber, inventors and perfectors of the system of exploiting nitrogen contained in the air which makes Germany independent of imports from Chile. The medals delivered are really of iron, but will be replaced by the real thing after the war.

Saving to Win the War

IN order that our soldiers and sailors may be supplied with food and clothing and with the guns and ammunition with which to fight the war to a successful finish it is necessary that about Forty Million Dollars a day should be saved and paid into the Treasury. This is about two dollars a day for each and every family—much beyond the means of many and much below the means of others.

To determine how this burden should be apportioned we have made a careful study. The results of our investigation are contained in a pamphlet just published, a copy of which you should have before you when making up your Liberty Loan Budget.

OLD 69TH MEMBERS ON CASUALTY LISTS

157 or More Were of Companies K and M, of New York Regiment.

Although the casualties announced yesterday in Washington contained the names of officers and men from all commands in the 165th Infantry, which had absorbed the old 69th Regiment of the New York National Guard, a large number of the wounded were members of Companies K and M. Some of the wounded were members of the Sanitary Detachment of the regiment, who had been trained as stretcher bearers. Veterans of the 69th here said that the two companies must have been exposed to heavy fire, and that the stretcher bearers were wounded in trying to carry wounded comrades to the casualty stations.

Captain John P. Hurley of Company K, who is slightly wounded, is the senior company commander in his battalion and has taken the command of Major Timothy J. Moynahan, who was slightly wounded in action about March 28.

Captain Hurley was a member of the Sixty-ninth for several years and served with it on the Mexican border in 1916. He was a member of the engineers' staff of the Public Service Commission and the Highways Department and did much of the engineering work in the border camps. He is about 35 years old. His wife is living now at 8 Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn.

Another officer of Company K reported slightly wounded is First Lieutenant Coleman D. Burns of 17 Arden Street. He served ten years in the old 69th and was promoted from Second to First Lieutenant when the 165th Regiment was in Camp Mills. His wife said that she received yesterday the official notification of his injury, and that the message stated he had been wounded in action on March 21. She received a cable from her husband on March 28 saying: "All's well."

Three officers of Company M of the 165th Infantry are reported slightly wounded, as are about thirty-five other men of the command. Captain Martin H. Meaney of 151 East Fifty-fourth Street, the youngest company commander in the regiment, is only 26 years old, but was a member of the 69th for eight years. He served on the Mexican border and was designated by the regimental commander to attend the first officers' training camp at Plattsburg. He was commissioned as Captain, and on request of Lieut. Col. Latham R. Reed he was assigned to a command in his old regiment.

First Lieutenant Floyd L. Stevens of Company M is 28 years old and lived at 170 East Seventieth Street, Brooklyn. He was Vice President of the L. A. Westermann Company, commercial illustrators, of 175 Fifth Avenue. He was an officer in the Twenty-third Regiment and served on the Mexican border. Lieutenant Stevens resigned from the Twenty-third to go to Plattsburg, and was assigned to Camp Upton and then to Camp Mills. Two years ago he married Miss Edna Baskerville of Bayonne, N. J. His brother, Harry C. Stevens, is a lieutenant in the 106th Infantry in the Twenty-seventh Division at Spartanburg, S. C.

Second Lieutenant Arthur L. Bunnell of Company M served as a non-commissioned officer in the Twenty-third Infantry on the Mexican border and was assigned to the Plattsburg camp. He is 26 years old and lived with his parents, at 178 East Seventieth Street. He had been in the newspaper advertising business after his graduation from Williams College.

In addition to the officers named, there are 36 members of Company M and 116 of Company K of the 165th Regiment who are named among the slightly wounded. All of these are residents of New York or its vicinity.

ATTACK CREEL.

Security League to Ask Congress to Abolish His Committee.

George Creel's reported statement that he was glad that the country was not prepared for war was attacked yesterday by the Executive Committee of the National Security League at a meeting and by the Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, who spoke to the members of the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce at 127 Remsen Street. The National Security League decided to ask Congress to abolish the entire Committee on Public Information as at present constituted, and a resolution was passed calling for the handling of the business of the committee "by three or five men not holding any other public office and selected irrespective of political affiliation."

Dr. Cadman said that if the sentiments attributed to Creel are correctly reported, Creel ought to disclaim them, change them or resign from his position.

General Pershing Reports 283 Casualties; Longest American List for Any Single Day

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The total casualties suffered by the American expeditionary forces passed the 3,000 mark today, when the War Department made public a list received last night from General Pershing, which contained 283 names, the largest number reported in a single day. PHILADELPHIANS WOUNDED.

Two Doctors and a Nurse Injured by Shells on Western Front.

LONDON, April 10.—In the course of the recent fighting and retirement on the western front, says an official statement issued this evening by the War Office, "a surgical team, which very generously had been sent to one of our casualty clearing stations by a Philadelphia hospital, was heavily bombed, and two officers and one nurse were wounded."

PHILADELPHIA, April 10.—It is believed here that the two officers and the nurse mentioned in the London dispatch as wounded are Dr. Edward B. Hodge, Dr. Henry Dillard, Jr., and Miss Isabella Stambaugh, all attached to a base hospital unit sent out by a local hospital. Word that they had been wounded was cabled to this city a week ago yesterday by the medical director of the unit. The families were notified by the War Department March 30.

The names of Captain Hodges and Miss Stambaugh were included in the casualty lists issued by the War Department last night. Dr. Dillard was only slightly wounded, and is supposed to have returned to his duties.

SECRETARY HAS TOUGH JOB

One Thinks He Must Be Smart, but Another Is Less Charitable in His Opinions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Thursday, April 11.—The Stars and Stripes, the American troops' paper, prints a story about a civilian in a derby hat and "store clothes" who recently strolled into a garage in a town on the American front in France where a dozen chauffeurs were sitting around a stove swapping yarns.

"Well, how do you boys like it here?" asked the visitor. They answered his question. Some of them liked it and some did not.

"Tell you what, guy," said one of the hardiest of the car propellers, "things is better than what they uster be. Time was when we got nothing but canned Willy and hardtack for Sunday dinner and didn't get any days off after driving the big birds up to the front and hanging around all night. Now, though, things are better all along the line. Guess somebody must of tumbled to his job down in Washington."

"Oh," said the stranger civilian with just a little smile around the corners of his mouth. "So you think some one in Washington was to blame?"

"Sure, and why wouldn't we?" answered the informative person. "We know all the people high up here and they're onto their jobs now. Chances are if they can't get things for us that they can't get 'em themselves from Washington to hand out to us. Sometimes I think some of them guys in Washington is fightin' this war in France—honest, I do."

"Aw, I don't know that they've done so bad," piped up another. "You can't expect 'em to fit out a million men overnight, when they were only geared to fit out about a hundred thousand before we got into it. Give 'em a chance, I say. And another thing," he persisted, "that gets my goat is the way the papers back home slams this guy Baker, the Secretary of War. He's up against a helluva tough job for even a lawyer to handle, and editors that's pannin' him would probably do a darn sight worse with it. He must be a smart son of a gun or the President wouldn't have picked him out for it."

The civilian laughed, and then—

"Well, boys, I've got to be running along," he said. "Who knows? Some one of these fine days I may be washing the top of a car and some of you may be Secretary of War."

And Secretary Baker, who was enjoying one of his little incognito visits to get right at the facts as the men see them, slipped out.

MEXICAN TROOPS FACE AMERICANS AT BORDER

FORT HANCOCK, Texas, April 10.—American cavalry patrols and Mexican Federal troops face each other tonight across the Rio Grande at the San Juan mine ford, eight miles southeast of Fort Hancock. Across the river from Fort Hancock, Federal troops at nightfall were "digging themselves in" and the two forces lay so close to one another tonight that the challenges of Mexican sentries could be heard plainly on the American side of the river.

Reports reaching Colonel George T. Langhorne, commander of American troops in the Big Bend district, tonight told of the death of five Mexican soldiers at the hands of American troops today. Three Mexican Federal cavalrymen were killed near here when an American machine gun detachment opened fire on the Mexicans after more than one hundred shots had been fired at the Americans from the south bank of the river. After two volleys from the American machine gun the Mexicans retired and were not seen again. Two other Mexicans were killed near Ysleta, Texas, in a skirmish between Mexican and American troops after the former had opened fire.

Army officers said tonight that it had been known for a week that a general concentration of Mexican Federal troops in this region had been under way for some time. A column of cavalry, the strength of which was estimated at 500 men, was observed today coming from the direction of Guadalupe, west of here, and it believed to be a part of the general concentration.

The purpose of the concentration remains unknown, but many officers believe that an organized effort will be made to oppose further invasions of Mexico by American troops in pursuit of bandits.

GERMANS MUTINIED IN PRUSSIAN CAMP

Three Officers Shot When Troops Were to Start for Fighting Line in France.

AMSTERDAM, April 10.—A mutiny occurred among the German troops at Beverloo Camp, in Linburg, Prussia, before the time they were to start for the fighting line in France, according to the Telegraaf.

Three officers were shot and several others wounded. The disturbance, adds the newspaper, was suppressed and most of those responsible for it were placed under arrest.

PARIS WANTS BEEF CONTROL

PARIS, April 10.—Representatives of the Paris Municipal Council today requested Victor Beret, Minister of Provisions, to check the speculation in livestock which has been in progress for some time, resulting in increases in the prices of dressed beef. The committee cited wide differences between prices at the stock yards and in theCentral Markets as evidence of manipulations, which the municipal authorities believe to be responsible for the recent increases. The Minister was urged to requisition livestock.

Bernard's characteristic cleverness is shown in the designing of the full-length stole front that drapes into a large collar, and shapes a deep fitted yoke to which is shirred the full rippling cape.

CRAZED SERGEANT KILLS TWO AT FORT

PICKED OFF FROM WINDOW

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., April 10.—Sergeant James Boyle, stationed at Fort Wright, Fisher's Island, N. Y., seven miles across the Sound from New London, today suddenly killed two of his comrades, seriously wounded four others, and ended his own life. It is supposed he became suddenly insane.

Boyle, who was a native of Allentown, Penn., and 40 years old, had recently returned to the fort after a leave of absence and appeared to be rational. A few moments after conversing quietly with a brother soldier he walked into the company office and without warning whipped out a revolver and began to shoot. His first victim was First Sergeant Fred H. Cook of Abington, Mass., a member of the Fourth Company. Sergeant Cook was shot through the heart and died instantly. Private, first class, Tomasse Gurbeg of Holyoke, Mass., fell dead with a bullet through the head.

Opening a window in the office, Boyle coolly began to shoot out promiscuously around the reservation. He was always regarded as a sharpshooter and especially expert with a revolver. Private Edward M. Greene of the Ninth Company, who stood some distance away from the office window, was chosen for slaughter, but he escaped with a bullet in his head. His condition is regarded as very serious.

Private Timothy Sullivan of the 30th Company, a New London youth who recently enlisted, was walking along the company street, when he was shot in the thigh. Lieutenant Jean Bechaud, staff officer, was another selected by Sergeant Boyle as he stood at the window. The Lieutenant received a bullet in the abdomen. His condition tonight was very grave.

Sergeant Adolph Hottoint of the 4th Company was the last soldier shot at from the window, and a bullet went clear through his jaw. His chances for recovery are about even.

When Boyle had finished picking off the men in sight from the window, he turned the revolver upon himself and sent bullet into his own brain, dropping dead.

Colonel Henry S. Dorsey, in command at Fort Wright, summoned surgeons from New London to render assistance to the small hospital force on the island, and Major English of Fort Terry, Dr. Daniel Sullivan, and Captain Cranston of the New London hospital base were dispatched to Fort Wright at top speed aboard the Government transport steamer. Captain Cranston was accompanied by two assistant surgeons and a nurse.

Colonel Dorsey said he could not account for Boyle's act unless the Sergeant was temporarily insane. An investigation was started immediately after the shooting. Boyle was always looked upon as a fine soldier.

MME. DUTREIL IS BETTER.

Ex-Justice Ingraham's Daughter Recovering from Injuries in Paris.

A cablegram received yesterday by ex-Justice George L. Ingraham said that his daughter, Mme. Claude Dutreil, who was injured in the bombardment of a Paris church by the Germans on Good Friday, was recovering in a hospital in the French capital. A column which shielded her from falling débris, prevented Mme. Dutreil from being crushed, the message said, and she was the only one seated in that particular part of the church who escaped death.

Mme. Dutreil sustained cuts over the ear and on the chin and a severe flesh wound on the right thigh. First reports were that both her legs had been broken.

BRING SCRAPS OF SHELLS THAT FELL IN PARIS

AN ATLANTIC PORT, April 10.—Two passengers who arrived here today on a transatlantic liner brought with them bits of projectiles with which Germany has been shelling Paris. Pieces of the shell were reported to be in great demand as relics. The bombardment caused more excitement among souvenir hunters than among any other class, according to the passengers, as the greater number of the shells had exploded harmlessly.

One of those who brought a specimen of the shell into this country was Percy R. Atkins, a Y. M. C. A. secretary, who had been for six weeks with the Rainbow Division, which is now occupying a part of the front line. He had a piece of the aluminum fuse cap of one of the shells, a fragment two inches long and an inch in width. Orlando Marshall, of Waltham, Mass., who has been driving an ambulance in the American Ambulance Corps, also brought back a piece of the shell.

Both men corroborated the statements in despatches from Paris that the population of the city, far from being frightened at the occasional long-range bombardments, regarded the shelling as one of the curiosities of war. With the exception of the destruction wrought in the Church of St. Gervais, which was due, not to the power of the shell but to the fact that it struck in such a way as to carry away the supports of the roof of the church, the execution done by the shells was reported to be inconsiderable.

Mr. Atkins said that all the troops in the Rainbow Division were straining at the leash for a chance to attack the Germans and that one company of Alabama troops had actually broken away from restraint, dashed into the German lines without orders, killing nine and capturing two Germans. Iowa men, he said, had been the first to carry out a raid and penetrate the German trenches. All of the other contingents were filled with envy because this honor had fallen to the Middle Western unit, and were giving their officers trouble in keeping them in the trenches.

Two Alabama men, according to Mr. Atkins, were the first to win the French Cross of War, and others from all sections of the country followed quickly in winning the same distinction.

Mr. Atkins said that Father Francis P. Duffy, the Chaplain of the old Sixty-ninth, now the 165th, was one of the most popular men in France and that men of all faiths were wearing the crosses which Father Duffy had purchased with a fund raised by his friends in this country. Mr. Atkins said that Father Duffy was continually traveling on foot from one unit to another and had become so well-known that parties of officers and others, visiting this section of the front, never failed to recognize the Chaplain on the road and to give him a lift.

PARIS PUPILS DEFY SHELLS.

Schools Reopen After Holidays and City's Life Is Normal.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 10.—The triumphant German reports of panics in Paris and an exodus of the inhabitants in consequence of the long-range bombardments have been effectively disproved by one simple fact. The Paris schools reassembled yesterday after the Easter vacation.

The figures show that the number of children absent, which in the week before the Easter recess amounted to 5 per cent., yesterday did not exceed 8 per cent. This figure will certainly improve during the week, as many children do not return to school the first day after the holidays.

There is evidence also that a large proportion of the people who left Paris before Easter are returning. The genera lappearance of the city is absolutely normal for April in wartime.

TREASURY MODIFIES BAN ON LOAN TOTALS

PADDED RETURNS BARRED

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The Treasury Department has revised its decision to withhold figures of sales of the third Liberty Loan bonds. The Governors of the Federal Reserve Banks today were directed to make daily reports of the totals of completed subscriptions.

Publication of daily figures on total subscriptions will begin tomorrow. Subscriptions for a day probably will be included in the Treasury report the following night. They will be recorded in two classes: Those which the Reserve Banks have received with 5 per cent. initial payments, and those reported by banks and trust companies, but not forwarded to the Reserve Banks with the cash payments.

It was explained by officials today that this publicity policy was in accordance with the original intention, but that the previous instructions had been misunderstood as barring tabulation in each community of subscriptions recorded by local banks.

The aim in this arrangement is to eliminate the uncertainty and confusion that result from taking the returns of loan soliciting committees and will include only actual subscriptions received by the banks. Duplicated reports of subscriptions also will be avoided by this plan. The broad purpose is to put a stop to exaggerated claims and keep the conduct of the bond campaign on a sure footing. In the previous loan drive there was a percentage of sales that were initiated only and in most cases to stimulate actual sales. The argument is advanced that after two bond issues the American public is now somewhat educated in the matter of Government bonds and there is not so much need of arousing the will to buy.

The progress of sales of bonds in the last four days, it was said, indicated this, and the promptness with which subscriptions have been made is believed to promise well for the success of the loan. At the same time, the experience heretofore has been that the later stages of the campaign require the hardest work.

The honor flag competition still holds the imagination of the country. The heavy list of claimants for the award of being first to complete a quota is growing longer. Six hundred cities and towns now demand first honors, and the number is expected to go to 1,000.

The secondary contest among towns and cities that, having completed their quotas, are engaged in repeating them by oversubscriptions is going forward with enthusiasm. Far Hills, N. J., holds the palm now for having done this nine times already. The aggregate of subscriptions by the successful towns is said to be not large, but the effect on sales throughout the country is likely to be highly stimulative.

Reports from the six special war relic trains that are touring the Atlanta, St. Louis and Dallas districts indicate the keenest interest. In almost every city where a stop is scheduled it is necessary to hold overflow meetings for crowds that cannot get into the train.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, the singer, today enlisted as a Liberty Loan campaigner.

"I surely am at your service for our country and Government," she wired the National Speakers' Bureau. "Just command me. On April 8 I bought for myself again Liberty bonds to the amount of $20,000. I am heart and soul for the United States and for the army and navy boys forever."

William S. Hart, the motion picture actor, also wired that he would leave tomorrow to begin his campaign on the Pacific Coast. His personal subscription to the Third Liberty Loan, he said, was $105,000.

An army of several hundred thousand school children will add its force to the speaking propaganda in behalf of the loan through the organization of Junior Four Minute Men. Every pupil in the graded schools will be permitted to enter the contest. Each contestant will prepare and deliver a four-minute talk, and the winners in each school will gain the privilege of delivering their talks before joint meetings of the entire membership of the schools and the pupils' parents.

NEW ENGLAND PUSHES SALES.

Nearly 100 Towns Have Already Passed Their Loan Quotas.

BOSTON, April 10.—Although still without official totals to indicate just what has been accomplished in the matter of disposing of the district's quota of $250,000,000 of Liberty bonds, members of the New England Committee tonight were satisfied that they were well on the road to success. There was no relaxation of effort, however, the announcement that every dollar of oversubscription was to be accepted and that Secretary McAdoo had set $5,000,000,000 as the goal for the country serving as an incentive for a big oversubscription drive here.

The list of towns that already have passed their quota continued to grow today and was well on toward the 100 mark. As rapidly as the returns were checked up honor flags were awarded these 100 per cent. communities and several banners were sent out today. Twenty-six have been presented. Lynn won first place on the roll of honor for this State. No other Massachusetts city with a population between 50,000 and 100,000 has gone "over the top." New Hampshire continued to lead the New England States in the number of individual towns and cities which have done more than was expected of them, claimants for honor flags in that State numbering thirty-three tonight.

Large subscriptions reported late today included $500,000 each by the Pacific Mills and the Provident Institution for Savings of Boston. A subscription of $1,000,000 by the United Shoe Machinery Company was among the sales reported by the Boston Committee.

She is scheduled to appear at the Liberty Theatre, Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street, at 3:30 P. M.

Banks Agree On Interest Rate.

Arthur M. Anderson, Director of Distribution of the Liberty Loan Committee, announced last night that every commercial bank and trust company in the Borough of Manhattan had agreed to carry Third Liberty Loan bonds for 90 days at not more than 4¼ per cent., the coupon rate. A few days ago the Liberty Loan Committee recommended to the banks that they agree to this rate, and the suggestion has been unanimously adopted. Similar steps have been taken by the associated banks in Boston and in Chicago. The Federal Reserve Bank's discount rate for 90-day paper secured by Liberty Loan bonds is also 4¼ per cent., and consequently institutions which rediscount the notes of their customers will be according bond subscribers facilities for which they will receive no remuneration.

A number of additional subscriptions to the Liberty Loan were announced yesterday. It should be noted that some of those appearing in the list have actually been reported to the Federal Reserve Bank, while some have not; and attention is called to the fact that in some instances applications filed by individuals or corporations are duplicated in the announcements of subscriptions filed by banks, the latter including the former.

D. P. Kingsley Urges Action.

Darwin P. Kingsley, President of the New York Life Insurance Company, who is Chairman of the Insurance Committee of the Liberty Loan, addressed yesterday about 800 agents who met at the company's luncheon room.

Myron T. Herrick, formerly American Ambassador to France, and Marie Dressler addressed a gathering at the Liberty Bell in City Hall. An incident of yesterday's drive for subscriptions to the loan was told last night by Mrs. Guy Wilkinson, one of the Captains in charge of the booth at the Liberty Bell in City Hall Park.

"We were taking in subscriptions," Mrs. Wilkinson said, "when we observed an old man slowly pushing his way through the crowd to the booth. When I asked him if he wanted to buy a bond, he answered affirmatively and showed me his honorable discharge from the British Army. He was a Gordon Highlander and seemed proud of that fact.

"I gave him the usual white receipt when he paid me the $50. Then he tore up the receipt with the remark, 'For the United States.' That was the old Highlander's tribute to this country for the support it is giving the Allies. I thought it was such a fine thing for the old Britisher to do, when so many native-born Americans will not give as much as $5 for any patriotic cause."

Parade of Elephants Postponed.

The parade of elephants and camels from the Barnum & Bailey Circus has been postponed until tomorrow.

The New York Stock Exchange expressed its support of the third Liberty Loan in this resolution yesterday:

Whereas, On the anniversary of our entry into the war our President has marked our one and undeviating course to be "force, force to the utmost, force without stint or limit," and

Whereas, This means bringing to bear the entire man power, industrial power, and financial power of the nation; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the New York Stock Exchange pledges itself and its members to the energetic and resolute support of the President and the third Liberty Loan.

Members of the Hungarian Society of New York are working hard in the interest of the Liberty Loan. The organization has already applied for $10,000 of bonds, and it is estimated that individual members have subscribed to date something like $100,000.

The display of Liberty Loan posters is not limited to buildings in the business parts of the city, but the owners of fashionable Fifth Avenue homes have given their approval to the exhibition of posters on their property. Already there has been placed on the ornamental iron fence surrounding the Vanderbilt house at Fifty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue two big Liberty Loan signs. Against the railing of the Oelrichs property and other well-known homes there have been spread signs reading: "He Also Fights Who Helps a Fighter Fight—Buy Liberty Bonds."

BAKERS OF CITY REACH MILLION DOLLAR MARK

Various Trade Committees of the Rainbow Division Report Satisfactory Progress.

According to the Advisory Trades Committee of the Liberty Loan Committee, the various trade committees composing the so-called Rainbow Division are making satisfactory progress in rolling up subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan. The men's clothing and other trades have already reported the receipt of many applications.

The committee representing the dress and waist manufacturing industry announced yesterday a long list of subscriptions, including the following:

Drubin Bros.	$10,000	J. Warshauer	$3,000
Sam and Louis Krohnberg	40,000	Wiesen & Goldstein	10,000

AMSTERDAM, April 10.—The German war loan propaganda is working under full pressure. The newspapers are filled with short articles, pithy sayings, drawings, and poetical efforts on this subject.

President Wilson's Baltimore speech is brought into the propaganda thus:

"President Wilson threatens us with force to the utmost, without stint or limit. We believe he means it. Therefore, hasten ye all and subscribe to the loan."

Janitor Invests $828 in War Stamps

PROTEST TO AMERICA ABOUT JAPANESE

SIBERIAN SOVIETS ANGRY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, April 9.—Premier Lenine, in his speech at Moscow yesterday, referred to the prevailing unemployment and hunger and said:

An official protest against the landing of Japanese at Vladivostok has been sent to Washington.

The Commissariat Foreign Affairs is about to publish secret documents which it is asserted show that Japanese action was prepared at the very beginning of the revolution. The Zemstvo at Vladivostok, encouraged by the presence of foreign troops, demanded that authority be handed over to it. The Soviet refused.

MOSCOW, April 9, (Associated Press.)—A protest against the landing of Japanese armed forces at Vladivostok has been sent to the Japanese Consul there by a committee representing the All-Siberian Soviets. Copies of the protest have been delivered to all the other foreign Consuls in Vladivostok.

The protest says that the feeling of indignation among the Russian masses caused by the landing has been intensified by the statement issued by Admiral Kato, the Japanese Commander. It is denied that Japanese in Vladivostok are in danger, and the declaration is made that the landing is an interference in domestic affairs similar to the Japanese participation in the civil war at Blagovieshtchensk, in the Amur Province, where the Japanese are charged with having taken up arms against the authority of the Soviet.

The murder of Japanese at Vladivostok, it is said, was clearly of a provocative character and cannot be charged to the legal authorities. The protest declares that the Japanese interference is an openly reactionary movement which threatens relations between the Japanese and Russian peoples. Deep friendship for the laboring masses in Japan and other countries is expressed in the protest, which adds that they will undoubtedly raise their voices to compel the Japanese Government to withdraw.

Communication with that portion of Manchuria where General Semenoff, the anti-Bolshevik leader, has been operating, has been cut. A Siberian committee which has been conferring with a Chinese delegation at Chita for the purpose of stopping raids by General Semenoff and restoring order on the Siberian Railway, has returned to Irkutsk and asks that troops be dispatched presumably to begin operations against General Semenoff.

Russian newspapers charge that the Japanese have supplied General Semenoff with artillery for the purpose of undermining the Soviet authority in Siberia.

TOKIO, April 5, (Associated Press.)—The landing of a Japanese force at Vladivostok was in consequence of increased disorders and the killing of Japanese there, the Admiralty announces.

Conditions in Vladivostok were constantly becoming more dangerous, the announcement says. There was no police protection and some Japanese were killed. Consequently a number of marines from a Japanese warship were landed this morning to protect residents of the city.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 10.—The Berlin papers pretend to be much amused by the statement that German war prisoners disguised as Bolsheviki were responsible for the riots in Vladivostok which led to the landing of Japanese and British sailors.

"But where will these grotesque representations find credence?" asks the Vossische Zeitung. "Surely not in Washington. Only in March last President Wilson ostentatiously assured the Bolshevist Government of his good-will, and only a few days ago the American Ambassador assured the Moscow authorities that Washington disapproved of Foreign interference in Siberia. It is hardly possible that Tokio should really consider such a farcical pretense, as intimated by a Reuter report, sufficient to raise a serious East Asiatic question."

FAMINE SPREADS IN RUSSIA.

Disorganized Transportation Is Blamed by Food Official.

MOSCOW, April 9, (Associated Press.)—"We entertain no illusions. Victory over famine cannot be expected under the existing circumstances," declared M. Brukhanoff, a member of the National Food Department, at the session last night of the Central Executive Committee of the Council of Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates. Continuing, the speaker said:

"Famine has spread among the great masses of the people owing chiefly to the disorganized transportation. There is plenty of grain in Siberia, Northern Caucasus, and in the Don region. In Siberia there are 150,000,000 poods [a pood is equivalent to thirty-six pounds] of grain, and in the Don province there are 5,000,000 poods, but the regular export to needy sections is difficult to organize."

M. Brukhanoff said that instead of the 35,000,000 poods of grain necessary monthly for a "semi-hunger ration," only 15,000,000, or at the most 20,000,000, were obtainable. This represented a great improvement over former conditions.

The Government has appropriated 1,500,000,000 rubles for the purchase of grain and of manufactured articles to be exchanged for grain. Six hundred carloads of manufactured goods of all kinds have been sent to Siberia and the Don region—350 carloads of leather, boots, and cloth, the remainder of metal products. From Petrograd 35 carloads are being sent daily—40 per cent. to Siberia, 30 to the Don country, and the remainder to the Ufa and Volga provinces, which are in chief need of cloth and leather. The exchange of goods for grain has proved to be the best method of obtaining the foodstuffs.

Improvement of the Trans-Siberian Railway, M. Brukhanoff continued, was the most urgent question, as European Russia was dependent upon Siberia for most of its grain. He said that of 4,000 locomotives which Russia possessed before the recent German advance 1,000 were disabled. This number was increasing because the repair shops were not being operated regularly.

RUSSIA'S OFFICIAL FLAG RED.

Trotzky Appointed Joint Minister of War and Marine.

MOSCOW, April 9, (Associated Press.)—Russia's national flag henceforth will be red with the inscription "Rossiskay Sotzialyiticheskaya Federativnaya Sovietskaya Respublika" (Russian Socialistic Federative Soviet Republic). This was decided upon today in a resolution passed unanimously by the Central Executive Committee of the All-Russian Soviets.

Chairman Sverdloff, proposing the resolution, said it was imperative to decide the question of the flag immediately, as "the Russian flag will have to wave over the embassies in Berlin and Vienna, and we cannot have the old tricolor, so I think it most proper to adopt the red flag under which we fought and gained victory."

Leon Trotzky, former Foreign Minister, has been appointed Joint Minister of War and Marine. He has been acting as Minister of War since the Government was removed to Moscow.

New German Envoy to Russia.

LONDON, April 10.—The Bolshevist Government, according to an announcement in the Izvestia forwarded by Reuter's Petrograd correspondent, has consented to the nomination of Count von Mirbach, former German Minister to Greece, as German Ambassador to Russia. Peace negotiations with the Ukrainian Rada have been opened by the Russian Government.

SENATORS OPPOSE "LICENSE" TO STRIKE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The attitude of organized labor toward war industries was debated in the Senate today, when the conference report on a bill making it a penal offense to destroy or injure war materials by explosion or other means was taken up. Senators attacked a clause in the bill that would permit employes to strike for higher wages or better conditions of employment. The clause objected to reads:

"Nothing herein shall be construed as making it unlawful for employes to agree together to stop work or not to enter thereon with the sole and bonafide purpose of securing better wages or conditions of employment."

Senator Sterling of South Dakota attacked the clause as unnecessary, arguing that the country could appeal to the loyalty of laboring men everywhere to stay at work while the conflict was on.

"It would be deplorable, regrettable, to think that organized labor would not stick to the country in its hour of stress. But I do not believe they would desert the country."

Senator Sterling read from a circular sent out, he said, by the United States Public Reserve Employment Bureau, an agency under the Secretary of Labor, in which union workmen were called upon to apply for jobs in shipbuilding yards. The circular, Senator Sterling said, urged the employment of union men to the exclusion of all others.

Senator King of Utah wanted to know the name of the official who issued the circular. "He ought to be at once removed from office," he added.

Senator Sterling did not know the name of the official, he said, but agreed that he ought to be removed.

Senator McCumber of North Dakota said there was not one shipyard but was obliged to accept union labor on penalty of not getting a Government contract.

"And that in face of the fact that labor is short in shipyards," added the Senator.

"We will merely be inviting men to strike if we pass this," he said. "Now is the time to make an issue of the matter. Let us see if union labor is to obstruct the war. I don't believe it has any such idea."

Senator Reed of Missouri argued that, while in peace time a strike was a matter between a private individual and his employes, in time of war it assumed the phase of an issue between the Government and loyal citizens.

"We cannot afford to have our war industries halted by strikes," he maintained. "Every man who goes on strike delivers a blow for Germany."

The Heirs of Democracy

THERE was started throughout the United States on Saturday last—April 6th—a Baby Saving Campaign, which is to have a vital influence for good on an entire generation of American children—the boys and girls who are to be the heirs of that Democracy for which this Nation stands ready to pay the last full measure of its devotion.

President Wilson writes thus of this campaign: "I trust that the year will not only see the goal reached by saving 100,000 lives of infants and young children, but that the work may so successfully develop as to set up certain irreducible minimum standards for the health, education and work of the American child."

Today's Housewife has for years devoted itself to the "setting up of certain irreducible minimum standards for the health, education and work of the American child." It is proud of the service that it has been its privilege to render in the past in this worthiest of all tasks—and it welcomes the enlarged opportunity made possible by this concentrated national recognition of the special importance of child welfare at this time.

Dr. Josephine Baker, who has charge of the "Care of the Child" Department in Today's Housewife, has been chosen as the Chairman of the New York City Committee on Health in this nation-wide campaign, a subcommittee of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense.

Today's Housewife—the magazine of American homemaking—is serving the women of America today as it has never served them before, because the needs of women for a magazine of this type have never been so great as they are right now. In the confidence of three-quarters of a million American mothers and homemakers, it has an extraordinary opportunity to serve, and to serve well, in this hour of great national stress. That this opportunity is fully appreciated is best indicated by what the magazine has already done, is doing, and is to continue to do in shaping and guiding the woman's share in our great common task—winning the war.

BULK OF OUR WHEAT MUST GO TO ALLIES

Of 42,000,000 Bushels a Month Two-thirds Are Needed Abroad.

RATION HERE MUST BE CUT

The enormous demand that the Allies are making on the wheat production of this country was discussed at length at a conference held at the Federal Food Board Headquarters yesterday of the fifty-three Deputy Food Arministrators of this State. They were summoned by Federal Food Administrator Arthur Williams to consider the most available methods of enforcing wheat conservation measures. Mr. Hoover was represented by F. C. Walcott, Dr. Alonzo Taylor, and Richard Whitney of the United States Food Administration.

Mr. Walcott and Dr. Taylor dwelt especially on the urgent need of reducing the country's wheat consumption to about one-third of normal. Mr. Walcott made his address at the morning session at the Federal Food Board Headquarters, while Dr. Taylor spoke at the afternoon session, which was held at the Union League Club, where Federal Food Administrator Williams gave the assembled deputies a "Hooverized" luncheon.

Describing conditions of famine in Europe, caused by the war, Mr. Walcott pointed out that about 4,750,000 persons have died of starvation there since the war began, while about 4,250,000 were killed by fighting.

"At the end of February," he said, "Lord Rhondda cabled for 25,000,000 bushels of wheat a month for the next three months. In addition we had to send 10,000,000 bushels to Cuba and 15,000,000 bushels to Belgium in the same period. In all 105,000,000 bushels had to go out in March, April, and May. Lord Rhondda stated at that time, 'You will pardon my bluntness, but unless you can send this wheat, we will not be responsible for the Allies continuing in this war.' As fast as Mr. Hoover could write the answer he replied, 'We ship your wheat on time.' And we are almost up to this schedule today."

Mr. Walcott said that our normal consumption for the six months commencing in March and ending in September, over a period of three years, amounted to 42,000,000 bushels of wheat per month. In order to live up to the demands of the Allies, he added, it would be necessary to ship two-thirds of that amount, leaving less than 15,000,000 bushels a month for home consumption. To achieve the necessary saving, the well-to-do, according to Mr. Walcott, would have to make a material reduction in their wheat consumption, supplanting their wheat and cereal dishes with other dishes. The poor, he said, cannot be expected to save wheat, because wheat is the cheapest of the nutritional foods, but the well-to-do can and should take to other foods.

Dr. Taylor surprised the administrators with the statement that despite conservation measures, the consumption of flour in this country during the last year has been about normal. A similar condition was found to be true for the first year of the war in France and England.

"Lord Rhondda told me," he said, "that the upper 20 per cent. of the population in England had saved 20 per cent. of its normal supply of wheat, but that the total consumption had been 5 per cent. above normal. The condition was a natural one. A nation at work consumes more wheat, and the masses working harder than ever naturally consumed more of that food product which was cheapest. It is no reflection, for instance, upon patriotism to say that the garment workers of New York who have had no raise in wages, have consumed more wheat this year than in previous years. They need more food to sustain them, and bread is the cheapest. On the other hand, working men who have had their wages increased also eat more because more work is expected of them."

After consultation with Chief Magistrate McAdoo, the Federal Food Board announced yesterday that it had summoned seven grocery dealers for violation of the label law of the State Food Commission. The hearings in these cases will be held at 3 P. M. today. The label requires grocers to post on their goods labels indicating the exact grade, quality, and price of those goods.

1,275 VESSELS ADDED TO NAVY DURING WAR

New Tonnage Is 1,055,116, Daniels Tells the National Chamber of Commerce.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Since April 6, 1917, the day on which war was declared against Germany, there have been added to the United States Navy 1,275 vessels, aggregating 1,055,116 tons, Secretary of the Navy Daniels said tonight in an address before the National Chamber of Commerce.

"In addition to the battle cruisers, dreadnoughts, and scout cruisers authorized, some building and others deferred temporarily for the more pressing construction of ships to transport soldiers, munitions, and supplies," he said, "We are now building of what is technically known as smaller craft, from 65 to 1,215 tons each, 794 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 420,217.

"We are working day and night in Government and in private plants on the construction of more American destroyers than were in all the allied navies when the war began, and every possible facility is being created to construct additional fighting craft which can be effective against the submarine warfare of assassination and murder.

TO ATTACK TRANSPORTS?

Washington Thinks Reduced Ship Sinkings Has a Meaning.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The increased troop movement to France to aid the Allies makes interest here in the submarine question acute. There were indications two weeks ago that the Germans had coupled with the assault in Picardy an effort to increase their inroads upon allied shipping.

Officials here believed that with the situation on the battlefront as Mr. Lloyd George pictured it, German submarine efforts would be concentrated against troopships to prevent American reinforcements from reaching the battlefront in sufficient numbers to influence the outcome this Spring and Summer.

While there has been no information to indicate any increased menace to the transports, the decided falling off in the sinkings of British ships last week and this week was interpreted in some quarters to mean the diverting of the U-boats to the transport lines.

CALL ON BUSINESS FOR UNITED ACTION

HAMLIN SOUNDS WARNING

Reserve Board Member Says War Will Not Be Won Until All Our Strength Is in Europe.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Speaking to more than 1,500 delegates, assembled at the sixth annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Charles S. Hamlin of the Federal Reserve Board said there would be no victory in the world war until the entire strength of the United States Army and Navy had been transferred to Europe. Mr. Hamlin spoke in the place of W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, who was unable to attend the meeting.

"Don't let talk of a premature peace mislead you," said Mr. Hamlin. "The only peace we shall see will be dictated in a large part by General Pershing and the United States Army."

The speaker dwelt upon German atrocities as a prime reason why American business men should see the necessity of exerting their full energies to aiding in the prosecution of the war.

"Some people say there were atrocities practiced by the Indians against the whites," he said, "but, compared to the Kaiser, Sitting Bull was a philanthropist."

The estimated cost of the war, Mr. Hamlin said, has been placed at $18,000,000,000 annually, but has run slightly below that figure for the first year. At present there are in the Federal Reserve Banks $1,800,000,000 in gold, which, according to Mr. Hamlin, is more than the gold reserve of the banks of Italy, Spain, France, and England combined.

Hurley Sends Greetings.

Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board, who was scheduled to speak, notified the chamber that an important conference would prevent his appearance. His place on the program was filled by Charles Piez, General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation.

Mr. Hurley telegraphed: "I was anxious to address your organization, as I believe you represent that class of business men who possess that broad patriotic wisdom of our country's affairs so necessary during these trying times. The Shipping Board feels that every member of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States takes a personal interest in its work."

Lucius Teter, President of the Chicago Association of Commerce, said in an address at the opening of the meeting:

"As all people under the flag come to understand more clearly their necessary part in the conflict of this hour, whether it be at the front, in the factory, on the farm, or in the home, we shall join as a nation in the motto, dear to Chicagoans—'I will'—the 'I will' of national aspiration, victory, and an enduring peace."

R. Goodwyn Rhett of Charleston, S. C., President of the chamber, said that the business man has furnished the leadership for the building of the American Nation.

"There was a time," said Mr. Rhett, "when industry and trade were looked upon as soulless, and those who engaged in them money makers only. But the business man has in fact created a new nobility for the common welfare. It is not enough for the business man to turn his genius to the saving of America from the menace of German militarism. He must play an important part in preserving America from the foes that threaten her from within. To me the highest mission of the chamber is to put the soul into business, to transform the cold clay into the sentiment—to transfuse into a marble statue the warm blood of the human being that will make its face to shine, its eyes to glow, its hands to clasp, its heart to beat, and its soul to vision."

Speed Up the Ships.

A challenge to American business men that they, collectively and individually, bestir themselves to speed up shipbuilding, was the keynote of an address delivered by Edward A. Filene, Chairman of the War Shipping Committee of the chamber.

"There are enough men to talk about the blame for delay due to causes which the Government can correct," said Mr. Filene. "Let us emphasize the blame that rests upon communities and the business men of these communities—and try to find a way to help. The problem of a contented and effective working force in our shipyards will not be solved finally by rhetorical preachments to the shipworkers at their luncheon hour, but by the definite solution of the discouraging problems of bad housing, inadequate transportation and inadequate amusements.

"What can the business men of the United States do in these fields? The answer is two-fold.

"First, we can see to it that our local business organizations in every community where ships or ship parts are being turned out shall make it their first business to organize themselves into an effective aid to shipbuilding.

"Second, we can help organize the community behind the shipbuilding in as definite a manner as we can organize the business forces back of shipbuilding."

The Committee on Industrial Relations also pointed out in its report to the chamber that the difficulties of obtaining war materials had been increased by questions of wages, of hours, and conditions of labor, of transportation for workers, and of housing, each of them of the highest importance to the maintenance of vital production.

"Industrial relations are the very hinge-joint of the war in which we are engaged," said the report.

Dwelling upon the part which labor plays in war, and the consequent necessity for the establishment of amicable relations between employers and employes, and proper working conditions, the committee said that in two years the number of men at work in our shipbuilding plants has increased by at least 500 per cent and that 3,500 factories are to-day at work upon articles which go into the construction of ships. The constructive plans suggested by the committee to insure industrial peace and efficiency included agreements that there should be no cessation of production, that these agreements be supported and enforced by Executive authority, that there should be control of causes leading to unrest and provision for conclusive arbitral decisions regarding differences arising in spite of preventive measures.

ARCHBISHOP OF YORK SURE OF AMERICA

GIVES PRAISE TO FRANCE

Happy in Reunion of America and Britain—Believes Future Wars Will Be Prevented.

The Archbishop of York, who spoke last night at the Waldorf at a dinner of the Church Club which was attended by Bishops from every part of the United States, who are in session here, said that he would take back to England the word that America would not fail the Allies, that there was to be little delay in putting America's forces into the field, and that the country was, with increasing rapidity, taking up the burden of its part in the war.

"If there has been some dissatisfaction and discontent with the quickness with which the United States has been putting its forces into the war, I would say to you, 'Do not fret. Do not worry. You will not be too late, if you come into the war with all your strength and every part of the country united in the war.'"

The Archbishop said that his tour of the country in the last month had shown him that a vast change was taking place in the spirit of the people, and that the reality was being fully appreciated by all Americans that the French and British had been fighting the battle of all free men and that the war was being fought to save the principles of liberty for which America was founded.

If the French and British armies should be struck back temporarily in the great battles now in progress, he said, they would continue to fight with the greater confidence because of the knowledge that this great and strong nation, with unstrained resources, was standing by their side and was, with the least possible delay, pouring its whole strength into the conflict, in which he predicted that they would in the end be victorious.

In spite of the solemnity of the great crisis facing the world at present, he said, one great encouraging fact was to be distinctly seen, and that was that a deep-rooted and unalterable affection had sprung up again, after clouds and misunderstandings of generations, between the two great English-speaking nations of the world.

"Two great nations," he said, "which God has so plainly joined together, let no man hereafter, on any pretext, attempt to put asunder."

He was cheered when he said: "In any discussion of this subject, I would not leave out the people of the great Republic of France."

He predicted that these three nations, after the present war, would by their union prevent future wars.

Nicholas Murray Butler was applauded when he said that the greatness of France and England in the present war was to be found in their "faith." Bishop Greer and William Edmund Curtis, President of the Church Club, made speeches. Nine hundred persons attended the dinner.

NEW ANTI-DRAFT MOVE.

Columbia Student, Whom Camp Upton Rejected, Active Again.

Henry MacDonald, Director of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, announced last night that the Department of Justice had been informed that Charles Francis Phillips, the former Columbia student who was discharged from Camp Upton on the ground that he had been convicted of crime, had issued a call for a convention of "The Young Democracy," on May 4 and 5 at the Mountain House, Valhalla, N. Y.

Inspector T. F. Fitch, of the Post Office Department, according to Mr. MacDonald, declared the pamphlet in which the call appears was unmailable, and orders were issued to seize all correspondence and literature coming from the organization, whose headquarters are at 32 Union Square.

Phillips said last night it had been sent to 3,000 persons. It said in part:

> And now there is being planned for us among other things the discipline of universal military training. We are to be made the energy and the mass of a Prussian military machine. Our lives are to be given out of control for good and all. Shall we submit to this as we have submitted to everything in the past? Shall we surrender ourselves without even a protest?
>
> We propose to inaugurate a change!

The signers include Phillips and his wife.

Phillips said that his new organization would be extended all over the country, would run candidates for office and issue pamphlets. He did not tell who would provide the funds. The names of Socialist Assemblyman Louis Waldman, Truman E. Potter of the University of Chicago, and Edmund G. Evans, a Quaker, of Philadelphia had been added to the members of his organizing committee since the circular was issued.

The matter was brought to the attention of the Mayor's Committee by Frank J. Welton, proprietor of the Mohegan Inn, Lake Mohegan, N. Y.

Phillips, Owen Cattell, and Eleanor Wilson Parker, whom he later married, were tried last Summer before Judge Mayer in the Federal District Court on charges of advising resistance against the draft. Phillips and Cattell were fined $500 each and sentenced to prison for one day, thereby losing their citizenship. Miss Parker was acquitted.

TEA FOR RED CROSS NURSES

Mrs. Speyer Entertains 250 Waiting to Go to Front.

Two hundred and fifty Red Cross nurses waiting to go to the front were entertained at tea by Mrs. James Speyer at her home, 1,058 Fifth Avenue, yesterday afternoon.

There were three units, No. 38, from Albany, headed by Miss Mattie Washburn; No. 20, from Pennsylvania, Miss Irwin commanding, and the Shell Shock Division 177, under Miss Adele Poston, with forty-six nurses and five reconstruction aids picked from all over the country. Miss Poston was the Director of the School of Nursing at Bloomingdale. Among those who assisted in receiving were Miss Amy Hilliard and Miss Anna Maxwell, Mrs. George B. McClellan, Miss Florence Johnson, and Mrs. Alice Fischer Harcourt.

"I do not think there will be need of a draft," said Miss Poston. "The Red Cross is instituting a drive for nurses, and when the doctors realize the need they will release nurses from cases that are not serious. There are many semi-invalids who have nurses travel with them; they are what we call 'luxury' nurses. The places of these could be taken by less well trained attendants or the members of the invalids' own families and allow the thoroughly trained nurse to go into war service."

Nurses billeted at Ellis Island will attend a concert tonight arranged by Mrs. George J. Gould. Rose Coghlan, Frank Belcher, Beverly Sitgreaves, Mignon d'Valery, Professor Kreigher, and Glen Howell will entertain.

ROMAN LEGION ORGANIZED.

Men of Italian Origin Move to Combat German Propaganda.

American citizens born in Italy or descended from Italian parents, met at the Italian Chamber of Commerce, 208 Broadway, yesterday afternoon and organized the Roman Legion or America to combat German propaganda, which is being spread to the detriment of Italy and her efforts in the war. The following telegram was sent to President Wilson last night:

> We American citizens of Italian origin, believing in America as our country and in the great institutions, the unshakable traditions and the principles she typifies—liberty, justice, equality, and humanity—declare unequivocally our unswerving loyalty and patriotic devotion to America and to her cause in the present world struggle for democracy, which is also the cause of Italy and her allies. We pledge our lives, our possessions, and our all to the President of the United States and to the Government.

Dr. Antonio Stella was elected President of the Roman Legion and Mgr. Alfonso Arcese and Stephano Miele, Vice Presidents. At a dinner given by the organization at the McAlpin last night, Justice John J. Freschi addressed the members on the objects of the legion.

The Season's Only New Car

Hudson Super-Six Touring Limousine

THIS new model answers every requirement of the owner who drives and who on occasion wishes to use it as a formal limousine.

But more important than the exclusiveness of its body design is its independence from the present scarcity of expert automobile repairmen.

The best mechanics out of every important repair shop have been enlisted to look after the motors of the army. They are needed to keep the aeroplanes, motor trucks, automobiles and ambulances in running order.

Those who are left don't know so much about automobiles. Every shop is at lower efficiency. Cars which call for constant service attention simply won't be as satisfactory as they have been. There will be no one to give them the needed attention.

The car that satisfies this year must be so built that it will stand upon its own design. Its construction as turned out by its builder must be final.

It is not a time when the buyer can safely rely upon the mechanical organization of the local dealer, however efficient and willing he has been in the past.

50,000 Super-Sixes Prove Their Reliability

No one doubts the position of the Hudson Super-Six. There are 50,000 in service. For two years it has far outsold any other fine car. Motorists are familiar with the character and number of its records made in every field that calls for super-endurance. Those tests did reveal limits, though far beyond those of the average car. They enabled Hudson engineers to extend the endurance of this new series.

The report from thousands of earlier cars, as made by private owners, also helped in showing what was necessary to make the Super-Six what we believe the present series to be—the most enduring car in the world.

construction and are expected to be finished in June next.

"The aggregate capacity of the schools now in operation is something over 3,000 cadets. One thousand nine hundred and twenty-six have thus far been graduated from this primary training course and commissioned as reserve military aviators. Very few of these have received their advanced training in this country.

"In addition to the above, the Signal Corps, acting upon the invitation of the several Entente Governments, dispatched some 1,200 cadets to England, France, and Italy last year, who were to receive primary and advanced training in aviation schools of those countries. The experience of a great many of these men has been most unfortunate in that at some of the schools a very serious delay has occurred in providing them with the training planes, which it was expected would be manufactured in foreign factories in sufficient numbers. As a result, several hundred of the American cadets have been practically idle and have made no progress. About 450 of them are reported as having completed the primary training, after long delay.

"The Signal Corps is giving serious consideration to the advisability of bringing the remainder back to the United States to be trained. With the exception of this severe disappointment, the primary training of our aviators, according to the testimony of the aviation officials, appears to be progressing favorably. The health record of the schools is excellent and the fatalities arising from aviation accidents, while always distressing, appear to be less frequent than in the schools of our allies, according to the testimony of the Chief Signal Officer.

TRAINING PLANES.

"For some time after the inception of the work the output of primary training planes in this country for use in our schools gave ground for grave concern. In recent weeks, however, the output has been greatly increased and there seems to be no doubt of the Signal Corps having an amply sufficient number in the future. On April 1, 1918, 8,458 primary training planes had been completed. The planes are of two standard types developed for the purpose and are equipped with Curtiss and Hall-Scott motors, respectively. The advanced training planes are being turned out in accordance with the schedule and estimates laid down at the inception of their manufacture. In advanced training planes four types are being made, the total number up to date manufactured being 342. In these planes three types of engines will be used, of which 965 have been completed. These include Gnome, Le Rhone, and Hispano Suiza, all of foreign design but American manufacture. The Liberty Motor is not suitable for use in these planes.

THE LIBERTY MOTOR.

"It is apparent from the evidence that the twelve-cylinder Liberty motor is just emerging from the development or experimental stage. Since the original design and the setting up of the first completed motor in July, 1917, a large number of changes have been found necessary, many of them causing delay in reaching quantity production. Within the last two months changes of considerable importance have been made which, it is hoped, will make the motor serviceable for combat planes of the defensive type and for bombing and observation planes. It is not designed for and cannot be used in the swift, single-seater fighting machine. A few of the motors are being flown in appropriate machines. These reports, as recited to the committee, indicate that with the latest changes the motor will be satisfactory for the character of work expected of it and that it bids fair to hold its own with foreign motors of similar power, weight, and purpose. For the campaign of 1919 the Liberty motor must undoubtedly be further improved in order to keep up with the evolution constantly going on along the front. The motor as now manufactured is of the direct-driven type, a type which has limits of usefulness in heavy machines.

"Steps are being taken in the designing of a geared drive, in order that the usefulness of the motor may be further extended and further improvements attained. Twenty-two thousand five hundred Liberty motors have been ordered, 122 have been completed for the army, and 142 for the navy. Four have been shipped overseas. Some of those already delivered are being altered to overcome the defects ascertained during the last few weeks. It is understood, however, that these alterations will consume but a very short time. The production of Liberty motors to date is, of course, gravely disappointing.

"The testimony shows that experts of the highest reputation and experience have, since last July, repeatedly warned the officials of our Government that the perfecting of a newly designed motor must inevitably involve many months of painstaking experiment, accompanied by many setbacks and disappointments. In spite of the unanimous testimony of motor experts along this line, the Government officials having the manufacture of the Liberty motor in charge have made the mistake of leading the public and the allied nations to the belief that many thousands of these motors would be completed in the Spring of 1918. Information of this sort, not borne out by the facts, has been injurious, and its constant dissemination the committee regards as misleading and detrimental to our cause.

COMBAT PLANES.

"The production of combat planes in the United States for use in actual warfare has thus far been a substantial failure and constitutes a most serious disappointment in our war preparations. We had no design of our own; neither did we adopt any one of the European designs until months after we entered the war. Much time was consumed in discussion as to types. Innumerable changes of designs and supecifications of the types finally decided upon have cost further delay. In all, five types at one time or another, have been adopted. Two of them have been abandoned after the expenditure of much time and money. The three remaining types still left upon on our program are now in the course of manufacture. Of these the largest and most powerful is the Handley-Page heavy bombing machine, designed to carry as many as six men, eight machine guns, and a heavy load of bombs, and to be driven by two Liberty motors. The history of the negotiations for the adoption and manufacture of this plane afford a remarkable illustration of procrastination and indecision, too long to recite. Suffice it to say that the designs and specifications of this plane, which had been used with marked success by the British and placed in production by that Government, were offered to our officials as early as May, 1917. The testimony before your committee shows that the Signal Corps finally decided upon the manufacture of a number of sets of parts of this machine about Jan. 1, 1918. Eventually the finished and tested parts will be shipped to England, where they are to be finally assembled in factories now being prepared for this work. Officials of the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps testify that they do not expect the completion of the first set of parts in this country before the month of June, 1918.

"Another type of combat plane, known as the De Haviland, is included in our program. This machine habitually carries two men, four machine guns, a moderate load of bombs and other apparatus and is driven by one Liberty motor. Fifteen have been completed; one has been shipped to France; the remaining fourteen have been very recently completed in this country. Some of these have been tested, propelled by a Liberty engine, and appear to have given satisfaction. The third type upon the program is known as the Bristol fighter. This machine is lighter and faster than the De Haviland. Its speed is expected to be in the neighborhood of 125 miles per hour. It is what is known as a reconnoissance machine. Another term which might be properly applied to it is 'defensive fighter.'

"It carries two men, four machine guns, and is driven by one Liberty motor. The decision to make this type was reached on Nov. 7, 1917. The manufacturers completed the first of these machines during the week ended March 30, 1918. The machine was tested once during that week with a Liberty motor, and, according to the testimony of the aviation officials, met its preliminary test successfully. This machine, a few hours after its flight, caught fire while standing upon the aviation ground and was entirely destroyed. The officials of the Signal Corps assured the committee that another machine would soon be finished by the manufacturer, and that if it met the tests satisfactorily quantity production might be expected within a reasonable period.

"The testimony as to this machine was given on April 2, 1918. This completes the list of machines now under manufacture and constitutes a correct statement of the situation in this country as of April 1, 1918. In addition to the American production of engines and airplanes as herein set forth, considerable orders for combat airplanes and engines were last Summer placed with European manufacturers by General Pershing, and we have furnished quantities of material and numbers of mechanics to aid in their construction.

"Your committee has full information as to the number and quantity of machines and engines ordered here and abroad, but does not feel justified in stating the number in this public report. The facts contained in this report are drawn from the testimony of the Chief Signal Officer, General Squier; Colonel Deeds, and Mr. Potter, the Chief of the Equipment Division of the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, and are confirmed from other sources, official and otherwise.

"Your committee, being devoid of technical knowledge of motors and airplanes, does not undertake to point out in detail engineering and manufacturing errors which may have been committed and which in part may account for this gravely disappointing situation. Your committee, however, is convinced that much of the delay in producing completed combat airplanes is due to ignorance of the art and to failure to organize the effort in such a way as to centralize authority and bring about quick decision. A certain aloofness in dealing with persons possessing information based upon experience, an apparent intention of confining the actual production to a restricted number of concerns, and a failure of the officials in charge of the work to grasp the situation in a broader way and seize upon the best approved foreign engines and planes and proceed promptly to build as many as possible for the campaign of 1918 has contributed to the failure. It is greatly to be regretted that the statements of Government officials have misrepresented the progress of the aviation program. This has misled the public, and your committee, cognizant of the facts, has, in the performance of its duty, made this report to the Senate.

"Your committee believes that production of aircraft should be controlled by one executive officer, appointed by the President and responsible to him. He should be assisted by a corps of the best aircraft engineers and designers possible to obtain, both European and American. The matter of production should be taken out of the hands of the Signal Corps entirely, and no man who has any near or remote interest in a company manufacturing airplanes or engines should be permitted to act as adviser or be in authority.

"While we are developing American aircraft and American engines we should temporarily, at least, procure an abundant supply of approved types of aircraft and engines of European design.

"Further, it seems to the committee that every encouragement should be given to the development of aircraft, and that any action which retards progress, such as trust agreements or the prevention of those developing machines from flying, under proper restrictions, should be removed.

"The committee also believes it to be its duty to point out that thus far no broad plan looking to future development has been laid down by the authorities. Warfare in the air is still in its infancy, and it is inevitable that rapid changes will take place in both engines and planes. It is essential to our success that those in charge of the American aviation development shall be constantly looking ahead and devising plans for a continued expansion of the program, as well as the development of new types of engines and planes."

The Minority Report.

The minority report, after speaking of the magnitude of the work ahead of the Government in supplying aircraft, dwells upon the causes for delay, and declares that in the face of unparalleled obstacles the record of the Signal Corps is one of which every American may be proud.

The minority report follows:

"We do not believe that the report of the majority of the Senate Military Affairs Committee on the aviation situation shows a proper estimate of what is being accomplished or that it is sufficiently complete to give an accurate impression of the facts.

"Soon after the war began the Signal Corps arranged with the French Government for the making of 6,100 combat planes at a total cost of $127,000,000, the plants to be produced as rapidly as American fliers could be trained to operate them. As the American aero squadrons reach the front ready for duty, battle planes are being supplied them under this arrangement. To aid in this foreign manufacture of planes for American fliers, the Signal Corps has shipped to France 11,000 tons of various materials and has sent 7,000 mechanics to release for French factories making planes for our American fliers the French workers on motor transports. The Signal Corps then arranged for the making of about 11,500 combat planes in the United States, the term combat plane being here used to embrace all kinds of planes, both offensive and defensive, except training planes. The Curtiss Aeroplane Corporation, the Dayton Wright Aeroplane Company, the Fisher Body Company, the Standard Aero Corporation, the Grand Rapids Aeroplane Company, W. H. Mullen & Co., and about nineteen other companies throughout the country were engaged for the production either of completed machines or of spare parts.

"Let it be said here that when the war began the United States Government had purchased altogether less than 200 airplanes in its entire history, and that of the few airplane factories in this country probably not one was making over five or six a month. It is hardly possible to grasp the magnitude of the task the factories contracting to make the 11,500 combat planes found before them. New plants had to be constructed, old ones fundamentally changed. Special tools for the making of the planes had to be devised and manufactured, and mechanics had to be trained to make the tools and also to make the planes after the tools had been completed. An airplane, especially the battle airplane, is one of the most highly technical, delicate, and complicated machines known to man. In no other form of machinery is absolute and painstaking accuracy in the smallest details more indispensable. It has about 4,000 parts, and requires from 1,800 to 2,800 different drawings in the preparation for its manufacture—almost as many drawings as are required for a battleship. Every part is strained to the utmost while the machine is in the air, and the slightest break almost anywhere means instant disaster.

Perfection Necessary to Safety.

"When it is remembered how often the wheels of railway trains, due to hot boxes, &c., parts of railway and automobile engines, tires on automobiles, &c., go wrong, necessitating immediate repair, and that any similar breakdown in an airplane would mean as a rule death to its occupants, some part of the responsibility and difficulty involved in making a finished plane may be understood.

"Remember further that every fighting plane must have machine guns, synchronizing devices, special telescope airplane sights, wireless apparatus, cameras of special type, electric heating devices for clothing, oxygen apparatus, speed indicators, special gauges, barometers, compasses, altometers, &c. To say that this complicated equipment is in steady and adequate production, and that the factories are now about in shape for quantity production of combat planes, and have about completed the foundation for what is as difficult and responsible a task as has ever fallen to the hand and brain of man, is to state the truth and at the same time to recite an achievement unparalleled in all history for so short a time.

"Remember again that when these combat planes were contracted for the only known lubricating oil adapted to their delicate parts was an oil made from the castor bean. There were not enough beans in this country to make anywhere near the amount of oil required. Neither were there enough seeds with which to grow the needed quantity of beans. The Signal Corps had to search the globe for seeds, and finally secured a shipload from distant India. Then the corps had to contract for the planting of the seeds in this country, and has succeeded in having about 110,000 acres planted. It is now claimed that a form of petroleum has been developed that will answer the same purpose. This, however, is still in the experimental stage, while the oil from the castor bean is known to be entirely adequate and reliable.

"Remember again that the cloth used in the wings of the airplanes of all types had to be treated with acetone, a liquid substance which makes the cloth as fireproof as possible, and also strengthens it for the immense strain to which it is subjected in the air. The Signal Corps is having this acetone distilled from wood under its own supervision on an enormous scale, and at a cost of about $20,000,000.

"The corps has had to find a substitute for Irish linen, as the material for wing cloths on training planes, and has succeeded in adapting a certain form of long staple cotton to this need.

"Coming to the training plane, it may well be said that the completion of 3,500 to date and the fact that they are now on quantity production, practically according to program, constitute a remarkable achievement when the nature of the task is fairly weighed. The training plane is simpler than the battleplane, and for that reason could be produced sooner, but the making of the training planes on a quantity scale is in itself a task of unprecedented difficulty and magnitude.

"Let it be remembered further that the Signal Corps had to put regiments of workers in the forests to find the spruce needed in the making of airplanes. The spruce trees are found among fir and other trees, and of each 100 feet cut only about 15 per cent. is found good enough for airplane construction. Approximately 1,000,000,000 feet of lumber had to be cut and inspected and tested before the necessary 100,000,000 feet of spruce could be obtained.

"Propellers are made from mahogany and other highly durable woods, and three or four must be made for each machine. This mahogany comes from the tropics, and whether and when it can be brought to seaport depends on tropical rains, which swell the rivers so as to permit transportation.

Defends Liberty Motor.

"Let us now consider the Liberty motor. The Liberty motor could not fairly have been called an experimental and untried device. It represented a combination of what had been demonstrated to be best in all motor construction. The Signal Corps, with its trained and skilled engineers, understood that a foreign motor could not be adapted to American manufacture and turned out in sufficient quantity in anywhere near the time in which the Liberty motor could be produced. Foreign motors are based on the metric system of measurements, &c. American practice and American manufacture are not adapted to this system. All parts made under the metric system must be converted into inches and fractions of inches under our system. The foreign motor is so extensively the result of hand work that it is with great difficulty adapted to the machine work that dominates American factories.

"Furthermore, the Liberty motor is capable of one hundred more horsepower than any foreign motor except a few of one single type, the Rolls-Royce. The Liberty motor develops 400-horse power ordinarily and is capable of 465. The foreign limit, with the one exception above mentioned, is 300.

"The Liberty motor has become so well established that the British Government has asked for a large number. Sir William Weir, head of British aircraft production, stated recently in London that he considered the Liberty engine the greatest single factor in the world's aviation program; that it was the most important single thing in the air program of England in 1918.

"As soon as the Liberty motor had been designed, arrangements were made for the manufacture of a very large number before the close of 1918. The exact figures are withheld for military reasons. Henry Ford agreed to produce a substantial number of the total, the Packard another portion, the Lincoln Motor Company, Nordyke & Marmon, General Motors, and the Trego Company still another portion. These companies were notified to get ready last Summer and the actual contracts were signed later. They have spent the intervening time preparing plants, tools, and workmen for this unprecedented work and are now on the eve of quantity production. The very names of those manufacturers are sufficient assurance that they would not take a day longer than necessary to lay proper and efficient foundations.

"The foreign planes which were accepted by the Signal Corps, known as light battle planes or single seaters, for which the Liberty motor is too heavy in horse power, were none of those offered by foreign concerns that came to America soon after the war began to sell their wares, except the Hanly-Paige, and that was not the plane which the Hanly-Paige people first offered our Government on this side. Indeed, when the Hanly-Paige plane was first offered here it was untried and undeveloped, and had not been accepted by the British Government. The Signal Corps sent a commission abroad to study foreign planes on the ground, and accepted certain ones only after careful and personal study.

"On the whole the record of the Signal Corps is one of which every American can be justly proud. In the face of unparalleled difficulty it is accomplishing an unparalleled task with characteristic American energy, capacity, patriotism, and enthusiasm."

It developed today that the Signal Corps last Summer, on assuming control of the aircraft program, at once put into effect a policy of secrecy. Howard Coffin, head of the Aircraft Production Board, who appeared before the Senate Military Affairs Committee in secret session, urged that the public be informed as to the progress of aircraft work; but the Signal Corps declined to acquiesce. Since that time, it is said, the Signal Corps has not only maintained its policy of secrecy toward the public, but has many times refused to give data wanted by the Aircraft Production Board.

PRAGER ASKED MOB TO WRAP BODY IN FLAG

Witness Also Tells the Coroner That Boys of 12 to 16 Helped to Hang Alleged Pro-German.

COLLINSVILLE, Ill., April 10.—A request that his body be wrapped in the American flag formed the last words of Robert B. Prager, hanged here by a mob early last Friday, according to testimony given today before the Coroner's inquest by Joseph Riegel, it was said tonight by persons who were present at the inquiry, which was held behind closed doors. Riegel, according to these persons, admitted he was a leader of the mob.

Riegel said that en route to the scene of the hanging several persons were met in automobiles, and Prager was forced to sing and kiss the flag for them. At the tree members of the mob questioned Prager for twenty minutes regarding his alleged pro-Germanism.

"Somebody tied the rope around Prager's neck," Riegel continued, "and several boys, from 12 to 16 years old, pulled him up. His hands were not tied and he grabbed at the rope. They let him down and we said: 'Now are you going to tell whether anybody is mixed up with you?' We told him we were going to kill him if he did not tell everything.

"All the time the crowd kept getting more excited and angry. Some one shouted: 'Well, if he won't come in with anything, string him up.' A boy produced a handkerchief and his hands were tied. I might have been the man who did the thing. I was drunk and because I had been in the army the crowd made me the big man in the affair and I guess I was sort of puffed up over that.

"Just as we were about to string him up Prager said: 'All right, boys! Go ahead and kill me, but wrap me in the flag when you bury me.' Then they pulled the rope."

The inquest was continued tonight in an attempt to conclude it by tomorrow night. No arrests will be made until after the inquest, according to W. E. Trautmann, Assistant Attorney General of Illinois, who is in charge of the proceedings.

PRESS THE HOUSING BILL.

Department Officials Tell Senate Committee of Shelter Deficiency.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—War, Navy, and Labor Department representatives before the Senate Public Buildings Committee today urged speedy passage of the House bill appropriating $50,000,000 for housing workmen at munition and shipbuilding plants and $10,000,000 for housing clerks in Washington.

Rear Admiral H. H. Rousseau said production and repair of naval vessels could be increased from 25 to 100 per cent. by providing housing facilities, particularly at Norfolk, Va., Portsmouth, N. H., Charleston, S. C., Mare Island, Cal., and Puget Sound, Wash.

Secretary of Labor Wilson told the committee that his department had prepared to undertake the housing work.

Major Z. L. Potter of the Army Bureau of Ordnance asserted that the condition in the District of Columbia, unless attended to, would "become a national scandal" and cause "serious derangement of the war program."

Alma Real, Soprano, Heard.

Alma Real, a soprano already known in Mexico, where she has sung with Bonci, appeared as a newcomer at Aeolian Hall yesterday before an audience including many Spanish-speaking compatriots. Opulent of voice, she sang with refinement and restraint in old Italian arias, to which she added popular Mexican songs by Ponce, Bertman, and Braniff, and an encore in dancing "Habanera" rhythm. The singer, amid her flowers, looked like the Howard Chandler Christy girl in a poster of the Liberty Loan, which with other wartime appeals decorated the stage.

Washington Sq. Players' New Bill.

The next program of the Washington Square Players, which will be offered at the Comedy a week from Monday, will include two one-act plays in addition to Oscar Wilde's "Salome," already announced. The other pieces will be Harold Brighouse's "Lonesome Like," played here by the Irish Players several seasons ago, and "Enter the Hero," by Theresa Helburn. "Mrs. Warren's Profession" will be sent on tour.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

A new Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic, it is announced, will be produced on the roof of the New Amsterdam Theatre on the night of Tuesday, April 23. The new show is being written by Gene Buck and Dave Stamper, and the entertainers will include Will Rogers, Lillian Lorraine, Eddie Cantor, Ann Pennington, Frank Carter, Lillian Leitzel, and Savoy and Brennan.

The Shubert Academy of Dramatic and Musical Art is to be established this Summer in the Forty-fourth Street Roof Theatre, and will open in June. Actors and actresses will be trained in the school for places in Shubert productions.

"The Third Party," a farce seen here several seasons ago, is being made into a musical comedy by Harold Atteridge, and will be produced by Al Jolson.

The first New York performance of "You Know Me, Al," a musical show written and played by men of the 27th New York Division, will be given at the Lexington Theatre tonight. The show will be continued for ten days, and the proceeds used to purchase and equip a portable theatre for use behind the lines in France.

CIRCUS INVITES ORPHANS.

Special Performance Will Be Given for Them Next Tuesday.

Following the annual custom of more than fifty years, the management of the Barnum and Bailey circus, now performing at Madison Square Garden, will entertain the orphan and crippled children of New York, at a special performance to be given on next Tuesday morning at ten o'clock. Usually the circus management entertains the orphans at one of the regular afternoon performances, but the special morning performance has been made necessary because of the fact that the advance sale of tickets for all matinées during next week has been very large, therefore limiting the space desired to entertain the orphans.

Superintendents and Matrons of orphan homes and asylums for crippled children in New York City are asked to communicate by letter, at once, with the Secretary, Barnum and Bailey Circus, Madison Square Garden, giving the name of institution and number of orphans in their care, so that reservations may be made and delivered to the different orphan asylums.

"Shanewis" and "Pagliacci" Sung

Charles Cadman's successful American opera, "Shanewis," in a new combination with Italian "Pagliacci," filled the Metropolitan last evening in the last week but one of New York's opera season. With Miss Braslau in the native cast were Mmes. Howard and Sundelius, Messrs. Althouse and Chalmers. Mr. Scotti returned for the first time this year to his famous part in Leoncavallo's prologue, while Mr. Martinelli, Miss Muzio, Messrs. Bada and Laurenti reappeared, and Mr. Moranzoni conducted the double bill.

An Open Letter to District Attorney Swann

Dear Mr. District Attorney:—May we publicly take advantage of this opportunity to convey to you our sincere thanks for the splendid work done by your direction, on the part of the Police Department and your own subordinates, in breaking up the "gangs" of ticket speculators who had become such a public nuisance in front of the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, selling tickets for D. W. Griffith's famous "Hearts of the World"?

These speculators, by devious tricks, had secured certain tickets which they were selling at $3, $4 and even $5 each to the public anxious to see Mr. Griffith's latest achievement.

Owing to the crowds, the speculators worked in comparative safety, despite the efforts of the police to enforce the city ordinance.

When the matter was called to your attention, however, and word came that the District Attorney had ordered this nuisance to the public stopped, the result was instantaneous and amazing.

The moment the "gangs" got wind of the order from your office, they faded away into oblivion.

Today the public can go to the box office of the Forty-fourth Street Theatre without being pestered by these gentry who block the streets.

As managers of Mr. Griffith's "Hearts of the World" and for the public, we desire to publicly thank you and the Police Department for all that you have done in the interests of the public.

THE PREMIER EXPLAINS THE BATTLE.

Mr. LLOYD GEORGE's explanation about the relative number of men in the contending armies comes down to this, that they are about equal, though as the German division is smaller than the British the Germans have more divisions. What he does not explain, but what seems to be fairly conclusive from his statement, is that neither side has any "army of manœuvre," any "reserve army." The reason why this mobile army has not made a counterattack is because it doesn't exist. Otherwise Mr. LLOYD GEORGE would not be reciting with pride the rapidity with which troops were rushed across the Channel to take part in the battle, and there would have been no necessity for brigading American troops with those of the French and British. If the French and British have no reserve army of manœuvre, neither have the Germans, since the forces are equal. The thing has become a gigantic wrestling match, in which every ounce of power is being exerted at every moment and nothing can be held back for strategic uses.

The whole German plan was foreseen by Sir HENRY WILSON as early as the beginning of February, even to calculating the extent of the British retreat. It had as its object, as General WILSON foresaw, the capture of Amiens and the severance of the French from the British forces. That General must have also foreseen, and the War Conference must have reckoned as certain, the advantage which the Germans would gain from the division of the allied command; yet it was not possible to take the steps necessary to unify the command and centre it in General FOCH until the catastrophe had actually happened. So strong is the aversion of soldiers to give up their military identity and subordinate their nationalism. Yet the plan for putting FOCH in command, as soon as the catastrophe actually happened, must have been made, then, in January or February, and he must have begun making his preparations at that time; so that it was not a case of his being suddenly raised into an unexpected command at the moment of battle, as was the case with MEADE before Gettysburg.

Americans may take just pride in the fact that President WILSON pointed the way, that his cheerful and instant response to the request that American soldiers should temporarily merge their identity has deprived British irreconcilables of any excuse for holding out against this necessary measure. "I shall beat them, for they have no united command," said the Kaiser to his brother-in-law CONSTANTINE. The Allies knew of his calculation, but he probably did not know of the steps they had taken to nullify it. They knew that a reverse was necessary to prepare the way for those steps, and they stoically made their arrangements to suffer that reverse. It is evident that the appointment of General FOCH is, both in the German and in the British mind, the equivalent of a lost battle for Germany.

The British Premier's speech makes it clear that this battle is as close to Armageddon as it is possible to get; that the two contestants are engaged in a death grapple, and that all that has gone before, in Russia for instance, has been mere preliminary play. Equally matched, and with no tricks in reserve, no cards up their sleeves, the battle is simply a brutal test of strength. It calls for every ounce of it. This is so well recognized in England that the Ministry has apparently been blamed for wasting armies in Mesopotamia and Palestine; but the Premier answers that triumphantly. "In Mesopotamia there is only one white division in all, and in Egypt and Palestine together there are only two white divisions, and the rest are either Indians or mixed with a very small proportion of British troops." With these forces the British have destroyed two Turkish armies and kept the Turks out of the battle line in France.

The world will be eager to hear more of Brigadier General CAREY, who improvised a force of "engineers, laborers, signalers, and anybody else who could hold a rifle" and held the gap the Germans had opened on the way to Amiens. But for him and his scratch corps, the Premier broadly intimates, the Germans might have got to Paris. We shall know more of CAREY before long, and of this astounding fight of his; and it appears certain that it will be years before the world ceases to hear of him.

THE PEOPLE AND THE BONDS.

The people whom it is most necessary to interest in the Liberty bonds are those who wonder why the Government is borrowing by billions if it is so rich as everybody says. One simple patriot who subscribed asked when he had to make his interest payments. He had grasped the idea of his patriotic duty, and was ready to do it. He had not appreciated that he was buying something which would pay him both interest and principal. There are not many so simple as that, but there are millions who do not understand the necessity of help from people with little incomes. They think it is the duty of the rich, and particularly of the banks.

It is peculiarly the duty of those who are neither rich nor poor to keep the loan out of the banks. There are not enough of the rich to furnish the Government with the immense sums it must have for the war. The nation's biggest reliance is the moderately well off and the humble wage-earners. They do not fully appreciate how great is the share they get. The largest total of incomes by any group of families is received by the group with the smallest family earnings. There are half as many families in the next group with average income of $850. They would pay the Government, if they paid proportionately, almost thrice as much as those whose incomes are but little smaller, so far and fast do their modest wages raise them in the scale. Families averaging only $1,000 income receive more than the families in any other group.

This calculation by a leading trust company puts the expectations of the Government from families on the basis of proportions in both bonds and taxes at $7,250,000,000, and on corporations at $2,750,000,000. The share of the banks is put at half the share of families. Yet most of the comment is on the basis of the banks doing most of the work. The cost of the war could not be raised by the banks and corporations. The loan would be a failure if it were raised by them. That would make this a rich man's war. It is a war for the people's liberties, and the loan will be successful in proportion that the people appreciate their relation to it.

CONSCRIPTION FOR IRELAND.

"If Irish liberty were at stake," says Mr. JOHN DILLON, leader of the Irish Nationalists in Parliament, "I would not hesitate to support" conscription. Irish liberty is at stake. In December, 1914, the Irish Party declared that "this is a war for the defense of the sacred rights and liberties of small nations," "a war for the high ideals of human government and international relations." Ireland would be "false to her history, and to every consideration of honor, good faith, and self-interest, did she not bear her share in its burdens and its sacrifices." She is not doing it.

What has happened since? Why should Ireland refuse to bear her share of the burdens of the war? The growth of the Sinn Fein movement, compromised fatally in the war by the treason of CASEMENT and his associates; the Easter rebellion, the new brood of "martyrs," the lawless proceedings of the Sinn Fein under leaders who seek for Ireland an impossible independence under German tutelage—these things are in every memory. The Sinn Fein insults to our sailors in Ireland are but too well known. Against England exists a romantic hatred, careless of the present British democracy, of the great economic ameliorations caused by land and other legislation for Ireland in GLADSTONE's time and since. That feeling, only too intelligible historically, however unjustifiable of late years, cannot cover hatred of the United States and the other allies shown by some of the misguided Sinn Feiners. Those cheerers for the Kaiser are simply pro-Germans. A movement for "independence" under German protection and patronage could end, if successful, only in the submission of Ireland to Germany, the loss of that liberty which Ireland enjoys at present.

Mr. DEVLIN and the other Irish Nationalists who side with Sinn Fein in opposing conscription forget that conscription has been found necessary for the preservation of liberty by the United States and by Canada. For the preservation of Irish liberty also it is necessary. Ah, but conscription in the United States and Canada of Irishmen is "not by the English," cries an Irish Member. Liberty itself is not worth fighting for if "the English" have a hand in the fight!

We cannot believe that the mass of Irishmen of Ireland, however much blinded and bedeviled by politics, are so blind or so base as to sacrifice to an ancient grudge the liberty of Ireland, it may be of all free nations. And if any Irishman in Ireland labors under the impression that Irish resistance to conscription will find favor in this country, where there are so many of Irish descent, where among all sorts of Americans there has been sympathy for Home Rule, extreme is his delusion. Americans of whatever strain are resolute to beat Germany. They have only abhorrence for those who in Ireland or elsewhere are playing Germany's game. Americans of many origins are in France, fighting by the side of Frenchmen, Englishmen, Scotchmen, Welshmen, of those noble Irishmen who have not been false to liberty or slow to fight for it in its utmost peril. In this country there will be no tolerance of opposition to conscription in Ireland. Why should Ireland escape the duty which England and Canada have done and are doing so well, which the United States has entered upon and will not turn back from?

It is time for men who talk so well about liberty to take their part in defending it. If they won't fight for "the English," as the best Irishmen have been fighting, let them fight for Belgium, for France, for the United States. Fighting in the British Army, they will be fighting for liberty everywhere, for Serbia as well as for Ireland. How can any genuine Irishman bear to be a slacker?

MR. CREEL.

Actual or inferential responsibility for the doings and utterances of Mr. GEORGE CREEL cannot any longer, consistently with the public welfare and comfort, be borne by the Administration. It is the general impression that when he speaks he speaks for the President, an impression he has not very energetically sought to dispel. His declaration that he should be proud to his dying day "that there was no rush of preparation in this country prior to the day the President went before Congress" could not have been made at a more inopportune time, but that is not the worst of it. It is an avowal never to be made by anybody at any time. It has aroused public indignation to a degree which is only faintly reflected by the denunciation directed against it in Congress.

The usefulness of the Bureau of Public Information has never been satisfactorily demonstrated, but the demonstration that, if the bureau is to be continued, it should have a new head is complete and conclusive.

NATIONAL AND PAROCHIAL.

General GOETHALS, opposing at Albany on Monday the Sage-Welsh bill to prevent the building of a bridge with piers in the Hudson River, opposite Castleton, told the Governor that midstream piers wouldn't obstruct navigation; that to build a bridge without piers would take 18,000 more tons of steel, enough to build "50,000 tons, dead weight, of ocean steamships"; that the Port of New York couldn't handle all the war traffic; that the Government was going to spend $25,000,000 on the Port of Boston before the end of this year and build great reserve storehouses at Schenectady. The bridge at Castleton should be built at once, so that there should be no delay of shipments from the West to Boston and New York.

Governor WHITMAN on Tuesday signed the Sage-Welsh bill. What is so pitiful a trifle as the expedition of war shipments compared with the momentous, the sacred interests of Albany Beadledom? Opposition to the pier bridge came from Albany, the Sage-Welsh bill was intended to kill the project for which General GOETHALS argued; it was an Albany measure. Albany ought to be grateful to the Governor.

THE SIGNAL CORPS FOUND WANTING.

The report of the Senate Military Affairs Committee on aircraft production lays stress upon the unfitness of the Signal Corps as at present organized to have technical charge of the aviation program. General GEORGE O. SQUIER is the head of the corps. The committee recommends that aircraft production be turned over to "one executive officer appointed by the President and responsible to him," who shall surround himself with "the best aircraft engineers, both European and American." Whatever usefulness the Liberty motor may have in the future, production so far is pronounced a disappointment. The reason has become well known. Constant tinkering with it by the specialists of the Signal Corps in an endeavor to make it a triumph of American design, when dispatch was the crying need of the war emergency, has delayed manufacture at the plants selected by the Production Board. A very serious indictment of misguided official zeal is made in the following paragraph of the report:

> The Government officers having the manufacture of the Liberty motor in charge have made the mistake of leading the public and the allied nations to the belief many thousands of these motors would be completed in the Spring of 1918. Information of this sort, not borne out by the facts, has been injurious, and its constant dissemination the committee regards as misleading and detrimental to our cause.

Time lost in planning combat machines, that were never produced is declared to be "a most serious disappointment in our war preparations." The Signal Corps could have supplied the army with the British Handley-Page machine, just as the Ordnance Department could have armed the American troops in France with the useful Lewis machine gun, but there was once more a straining after the ideal, and effort was obstructed by the usual red tape. And two other combat planes of foreign make are said to have been available. But at the end of our first year of war not a single American-built fighting machine was flying on the western front.

The responsibility of the Signal Corps for bedeviling and delaying the aviation programme is so palpable, and has been so costly, that the President cannot fail to give the most serious consideration to the recommendation of Senator CHAMBERLAIN and his associates. No time, not a day, should be lost in placing aircraft production in the hands of a man of executive ability and driving power.

ANOTHER FIGHT FOR THE SEA.

A glance at the map of the western front shows that the base for the strong German assault on the line from La Bassée Canal to Armentières and still further north, almost as far as Comines, is Lille. From that great industrial city railroads radiate in every direction, affording a system for concentrating troops and transporting them to the front much superior to the facilities at the disposal of the British. Therein lies a danger to Marshal HAIG's forces on that part of the line he has been defending. The German tactics in the offensive that was launched on March 21 call for assaults on a wide front that, if successful, will prepare the way for strategy on a major scale. Flattening out a salient is only an incident in the execution of the German plans. While trench warfare continued, the reduction of a salient was a notable achievement.

That the Germans should have succeeded in their drive north of Lens in pressing the British and a Portuguese contingent back is disquieting until the failure of the Germans in the south—that is to say, from La Fère to Arras—to attain Amiens or to open the road to Paris is weighed in the balance. The line of the Allies in the southern part of the field has been pushed back mile after mile, but nowhere has a gap been made through which mobile troops could be poured in great strength. The attack in the north signifies that the Germans know that they are far behind their schedule elsewhere, with final success in grave doubt. It is obvious that in this new venture they are pursuing the same tactics as they have employed in the south, their immediate object being to smash the enemy line on a wide front, and demoralize and disorganize the British Army, isolating one part of it from the other; the ultimate German object being, in this case, to get to the sea and break up the defensive campaign in the north altogether.

With their superior transportation and their resultant greater strength in men and guns, the Germans, starting their assault in thick weather, had no serious difficulty in forcing the irregular British line back at several points between the La Bassée Canal and Armentières. Two "towns," north and south of the old fighting ground of Neuve Chapelle—respectively, Richebourg-St. Vaast and Laventie—were taken, and at Fauquissart and Cardonnerie Farm the British had to give ground. At crossings on the River Lawe and Lys the fighting was especially heavy, and the Lys south of Armentières was crossed in several places. But it is to be borne in mind that every foot of that region is familiar to the defenders, and that in the Fall of 1914 it was the scene of the fight for the sea, which the Germans lost, although they were in greatly superior force.

A heavy attack in the neighborhood of Comines, which is only five miles from Ypres of glorious memory for the British, indicates that the Germans have begun another fight for the sea. But how changed are the conditions on the British side. In October, 1914, they were often reduced to desperate straits for want of reinforcements, divisions dwindling to skeletons of brigades and regiments to little more than corporals' guards; and the British became grimly familiar with failing ammunition. It has been said that "whole battalions virtually disappeared." Nevertheless, remnants held on and saved the day. The first Ypres was a positive British victory. The Kaiser, waiting at Roulers for news of an overwhelming triumph, was doomed to disappointment.

In the present battle there is a disparity of numbers in favor of the Germans, but it is probably not so great as it was in 1914. At the first Ypres there were sometimes eight Germans to every British soldier on the field, and often four or five. And the British today are said to have abundant ammunition and superiority in the air. They will undoubtedly take heavy toll of the massed Germans, and the presumption is that the British will retire to prepared positions for tactical reasons rather than from absolute necessity. The counterstroke at Givenchy, which netted them 750 prisoners, is of good omen.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Silences, Filled with Fears.

There is constant complaint on both sides of the water with respect to the mail service to and from the men in our expeditionary force. The complaint, as yet, is rather in the tone of grief than of anger—a fact explicable only by a general realization that the Government's transportation facilities are strained close to the breaking point by tasks even more important than that of carrying letters for our soldiers and sailors abroad. There is, however, a feeling that the mail service should be better than it is, and that it could be made so without interfering seriously, or even at all, with the performance of tasks to which everything else must be subordinated.

If it were shown or believed that the choice is between moving mail and getting men into the field, equipped and supplied, there would be patriotic resignation, even to a complete abandonment, till the crisis is over, of all efforts to keep up communication of what might be called the personal sort. But that has not been shown and it is not believed. On the contrary, the all but universal impression is that the military authorities do not sufficiently appreciate the benefits that would follow both here and on the other side of the ocean if the present anxieties were lightened by a fairly frequent exchange of information as to individual conditions and fortunes.

If space and tonnage lack for the transportation of letters, let the size of the communications be reduced. Far better than nothing would be the weekly receipt of a printed card such as is used by both the British and the French—a card on which nothing is written except the signature, the other news being conveyed by crossing out printed lines till only those are left that tell the few vital facts that everybody feels that he or she must know about the absent one to make life tolerable. Such cards would not be satisfactory, but they would be vastly better than nothing, and an enormous number of them would occupy little space.

Anything is better than silence, continuing week after week, and equally harmful to morale here and in France.

A Serious Mistake Was Made.

It will be with a regret deeply tinged with indignation that all sane and reasonably enlightened people will hear of the decision by the heads of the Red Cross not to use for animal experimentation—often and almost always incorrectly called "vivisection"—the money hitherto appropriated by them for that purpose. The decision may mean avoiding the loss of a few contributions to the Red Cross funds, but it also means the triumph of vicious ignorance over common sense, and it will encourage to further efforts the members of the most detestable and not the least dangerous group of men and women to be found in the United States.

The campaign of the anti-vivisectionists is waged, now as always, with no other weapons than those of calumny and falsehood. They deliberately and persistently make the most abominable accusations against men who have done and are doing an enormous amount of successful work to mitigate human suffering and to save human life. Incidentally, these same workers are conferring like advantages on innumerable domestic animals, but let that pass. The immediate issue is that interference with animal experimentation just now decreases the safety of the men in our army and navy, makes impossible, so far as the interference is effective, the conquest of several terrible diseases to which the fighters for liberty are still exposed, and sets up the absurd claims of fanatic degenerates against the well-demonstrated truths of medical science.

And the Red Cross cautiously says that it does not take sides for or against "vivisection"! Such caution is reprehensible—is utterly unworthy of that great and beneficent organization. It should take sides, standing for right and against wrong. The immediate profit of doing anything else or less will be dearly bought in future loss of both money and respect. Red Cross money, in the amount that was proposed, could not possibly have been better invested than in the establishment of a biological laboratory near the scene of war for the study of the maladies of soldiers which this sort of research has not yet conquered. It was weak, and worse than weak, for the Red Cross to heed the hysterical shrieks and the monstrous charges of venality and murder that came from a few people whom it strains charity to call deluded or insane.

The Times War Service.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with pleasure your recent one-page advertisement calling attention to your excellent war news service, and being a faithful reader of your paper I, of course, indorse every word of it. The way you have "covered" the war has been truly magnificent. In quality and extent the information you have furnished your readers has been unrivaled. Praise be to you for your accomplishment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to congratulate THE TIMES for having such excellent war correspondents as Philip Gibbs and Charles H. Grasty—one giving such a vivid description of the military battlefront and the other of the political battleline. I note that Mr. Gibbs predicted the great German drive in your issue of Feb. 20, while it was only a few weeks ago that Washington correspondents reported that there would be no German offensive.

The Poly-Partisan Woman's Party.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that the Woman Suffrage Party has reformed and changed its mind, according to one of the great leaders, after giving its members "time to study and think" and conducting "a campaign of education for citizenship" among the ex-superior sex, why on earth do "our trained women" insist that "the organization is still non-partisan"? Just a little more time "to study and think" will convince even the suffrage leaders that they have no longer a "non-partisan" party, but a poly-partisan party. If they do not believe it, Noah Webster has been sadly neglected in the "great campaign of education" and another change of mind is in order.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Lane's wonderfully pertinent and patriotic speech has given me an idea which I should like to suggest to your readers. Why not organize a "Melting Pot" Society, whose slogan would be "English is the language of America. Loyal citizens will speak it"? Have cards printed with these words and the Stars and Stripes on them, and have them distributed by members of the society to all the stores with which they deal.

I have been surprised at the amount of German spoken both by proprietors and customers in the various stores.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Regarding the collapse of the Russian Church, concerning which communion there appeared in your columns of recent date an interesting historical résumé, it may be stated as an axiom that no national church can outlive its peculiarly national inspiration.

It has been the chief characteristic of both the Orthodox and other Eastern Churches that they have been since the very beginnings of Christianity in Turkey proper, Syria, Greece, Rumania, and the Slavonic countries, nationally particularistic. In each community where Orthodox Christianity has established itself, we find the Church, not as the mere vehicle of religious expression, but as the especial and chief exponent of nationalism. This is true in all the non-Protestant communities in the Turkish Empire, and is especially true in Bulgaria, Serbia, and Rumania, as well as in Russia. So well is this principle recognized in the East that the Turkish word "millet" means both "religion" and "nationality." The entire politico-ecclesiastical basis of Eastern Christianity is embodied in this undeniable fact, which really constitutes the most important point of difference between the great Eastern and Western Christian communions. The non-Protestant West, with the incomparable organization of Rome at its head, has always insisted on extra-national centralization, while the whole Eastern conception of Church government has been based upon intra-nationalism, with the State as the inseparable protector of the Church, and the Church as an integral part of the State. So, when the Russian people, to quote President Wilson, "by their own act" destroyed their political integrity, the fall of the Church as a factor was inevitable and should excite no surprise.

Most unfortunately, since the disappearance of religious influence, that devotion and piety, for which the Russians were justly celebrated, seem to have found another outlet, degenerating in many quarters into the "worship of mankind," with the pernicious gospel of license instead of liberty, and encroachment instead of equality.

What the ultimate destiny of Russian Orthodoxy as an organized body is to be, no man can predict at this moment, but, judging by past history, it may safely be prophesied that its fate will be that of the future Russian State, or of the component parts, into which future Russia may resolve herself.

Changes in the Russian Language.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial article in today's TIMES on the elimination, by the Bolsheviki, of three letters from the Russian alphabet directs attention to a fiasco by the Batiushka ex-Czar himself in changing the name of the Russian capital, of which we have a flourishing namesake city in our own Virginia, to that of Petrograd. The latter is a compound word, "Petro-grad," neither portion of which is Russian. Petro stands for Peter. In the ancient Slaviansko Church language "grad" means town. This combination was probably inspired by the unlamented monk Rasputin. In the real Russian language "grad" means hailstone, consequently Petrograd means "Halls of Peter." The Batiushka meant to name the town Petrogorod, signifying "The City of Peter." It is to be expected, as soon as Russia shall free herself from hailstones of interior and exterior kind, which is certain to come with and by the aid of the United States of America, the name of her capital will be Glavnygorod, which means Capital City, or most important city. This is typical of the nomenclature of Russian cities: Novogorod, New City; Starogorod, Old City, &c.

Roads for the Nation's Business.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We want to go on record as having protested strongly against the bill introduced in our New York Legislature by one of the Senators, at the request of the State Highway Department, relative to barring of State roads to army trucks. In our opinion the passage of this bill would do more to help the Hun than the sinking of a dozen or more transports. At the present time, when New York is laboring under the tremendous handicap caused by lack of transportation facilities and when every engineer in the country is trying his best to solve the transportation problem, legislation of this sort is to be completely condemned. Why didn't our worthy Senator bar the roads to passenger vehicles? Why use the roads at all, for that matter, for the passage of any sort of vehicle results in some wear? The President has asked for universal co-operation, and we are sure that he included our own State in his request. Are we to meet his request by refusing the use of our roads in the nation's business?

Women Telling Their Ages.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This is a time of change, as well as good sap weather. While admitting the well-favored run of editorial humor in today's piece, "Time and Woman," I must gently insist on its prehistoricity. The "petticoated registrant" glories in her age. Yesterday the one ahead of me cheerfully gave hers as 29, the one before her as 40. I noticed a 70, a 82, and a 57 in the record, and stated my own 41 to the twinkling clerks only with a sense of comfort in having reached the philosophic years. The women watchers said afterward that not a woman balked at the "Chinese inquisition."

They did say, however, that the "men folks" in this polling place were still laughing over the tale of two men voters, sober, domestic citizens of no uncertain years, who refused to give their ages at the last election.

YOUTH.

Of sun-gilded days spun of youth all aglow,
A shimmering tinsel of tremulous moonbeams—
As glittering bright as the sun on the snow.
No flaw in its sheen of the finest-spun fabric,
It shone with the splendor of hopes and glad dreams,

In briar and weed at the falling of night;
The gold and the silver were tarnished and tawdry,
Then I looked at the ruin of youth without wonder,
For wisdom had come and illusions were gone,

FAVOR DAIRYMEN'S LEAGUE.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 10.—The Louis M. Martin bill, designed to exempt the State Dairymen's League from the conspiracy section of the Penal law, passed the Assembly this afternoon, 79 to 53. The opponents of the bill declared it is an effort to break down the Donnelly anti-trust law. It prescribes that contracts or combinations made by farmers and dairymen's associations or their officers are not conspiracies.

An echo of the numerous fights this session to obtain the farmers' votes manifested itself in the debate on the bill. Assemblyman Duke, Jr., of Allegany asserted that the bill was an effort to "get the farmer vote," while McCue of New York offered an amendment "that no candidate for Governor be named until his name is approved by the Dairymen's League and that any conspiracy in that direction shall not be unlawful." The amendment was not accepted by the introducer. Several opponents of the measure declared it was introduced to find a way out for the six officials of the Dairymen's League indicted in New York City for violation of the anti-trust law.

The Slater bill, prohibiting the use in public schools of any textbook containing seditious matter, was sent to the Governor. It creates a commission, to consist of the State Education Commissioner and two persons to be designated by the State Board of Regents, who will examine all textbooks for unlawful matter. Prohibited books in use in the schools may be continued until Sept. 1.

Assemblyman Soule's bill, extending the time for employment of women in restaurants from 10 P. M. to 1 A. M. in all first and second class cities, was defeated, 107 to 26.

$56,076,000 IN WAR TAXES.

February Receipts Bring the Total Since July 1 to $251,890,000.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—War taxes took from the pockets of the American people $56,076,000 in February, or $251,890,000 in the eight months since last July 1. These figures, reported today by the Internal Revenue Bureau, are the tax increases for those periods over the same periods of the year previous, and represent substantially the result of heavier war levies.

Total internal revenue collections in February were $89,130,000, and since July 1, 1917, were $549,962,000. This is only one-seventh of the $3,400,000,000 total expected from tax sources, mainly income and excess profits taxes, before next July 1.

Freight tax collections of $4,625,000, representing 8 per cent. of freight payments, indicate that $57,812,500 worth of hauling business was done by the railroads. Most of this probably was for January, as reports on collections were several weeks late.

The month's passenger fare bill of the nation apparently was $55,820,000, for aggregate collections from the 8 per cent. tax on the cost of passenger tickets were $4,465,000. Pullman fares paid by travelers must have been $4,468,000, since the 10 per cent. tax brought in $446,800. Express taxes, 5 per cent. of the payment, were $767,000, indicating that the amount of business done was $15,355,000. From the tax of 5 cents on each telephone or telegraph message of 15 cents or more, $1,063,000 was raised, indicating that 21,275,000 messages were dispatched.

The nation's theatre and amusement bill for the month appears to be $37,083,000, as $3,708,000 was collected from the 10 per cent. tax. It also is indicated that the American people spend $3,659,000 for club dues every month, and pay 10 per cent. of this as Government tax.

DISCUSS TEXTILE CONTROL.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Suggestions that the Government either take over for distribution or fix prices on all cotton and woolen goods were discussed at President Wilson's weekly conference today with the heads of Government warmaking agencies.

Heavy demands of the army and navy, it was said, will take such a large percentage of the output of mills that probably there will not be enough goods to supply all the requirements of the civilian population. Officials fear that if some measures are not taken to hold prices down and to assure equitable distribution many persons will be unable to obtain a proper amount of clothing.

Representatives of the cotton-manufacturing industry met here today with the Price-Fixing Committee of the War Industries Board to take up the stabilization of cotton goods prices. Heavy Government purchases have disorganized the market, and manufacturers themselves asked for the conference.

NO DINNER TO PROF. NEARING

No dinner was given to Professor Scott Nearing, now under indictment by the Federal Grand Jury, as had been announced for the Central Opera House, Sixty-seventh Street, near Third Avenue, last night. Not a single friend of Professor Nearing put in an appearance.

A squad of police, which was at the hall as early as 6 o'clock, dwindled to the proportion of a single uniformed patrolman an hour later. The men on the police detail were surprised to learn from Rudolph Kutner, manager of the hall, that President Max Verschleiser of the Central Opera House Corporation had been notified on Tuesday afternoon that the luncheon was off after plans looking to providing 500 guests were well advanced.

Elizabeth Freeman of 138 West Thirteenth Street, a prominent suffragist, who had charge of the distribution of the tickets, said the dinner had been postponed because it had been considered inadvisable to hold it at this time.

When the Board of Inebriety met yesterday at its offices, 300 Mulberry Street, it became known that Mayor Hylan had reappointed William J. Donovan as the permanent Secretary.

Sylvan Levy, whose appointment was announced seven weeks ago, was elected President of the board.

Dr. John Dorning, head of St. Francis' Hospital, Bronx, and the Rev. J. J. Hughes of the Paulist Fathers, who had offered their resignations, it was announced had been reappointed by the Mayor.

GIVES PREFERENCE TO WAR INDUSTRIES

PLAN IS TO BE EXTENDED

Will Apply to Raw Materials and Other Supplies, and Additional Industries May Be Included.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The War Industries Board, of which Bernard M. Baruch is Chairman, announced today that industries contributing directly to the war needs of the nation and its allies would have preference in the delivery of coal and coke. The Railroad and Fuel Administrations were notified that their facilities must be used as directed in carrying out the program. The effect of the regulations is to provide first for essential industries and treat the nonessential on the basis of the country's needs and the amount of the surplus coal which can be safely spared. A statement issued tonight said:

"The Priorities Board has adopted Preference List No. 1 for the guidance of all Governmental agencies in the supply and distribution, by rail or water, of coal and coke. While the list speaks for itself, it is proper to say that the board has not undertaken to classify any industry as nonessential or at this time to limit the quantity of fuel which any particular industry or plant shall receive.

"The board has, however, listed certain industries whose operation is of exceptional importance, measured by the extent of their direct or indirect contribution either toward winning the war or toward promoting the national welfare, and these industries will be accorded preferential treatment by the Fuel Administration in the distribution of coal and coke and also in the transportation of such coal and coke by the railroads.

"The same plan will be followed in according preferential treatment to war industries and plants in the transportation of raw materials and supplies required by them in their manufacturing operations, so that they may not be delayed or hampered in complying with priority orders issued against them governing their products.

"Preference List No. 1 is not complete in itself, but it will be noted that provision is made for certifying additional classes of industries and also individual plants whose operations are necessary as a war measure. In determining what industries or plants are entitled to be certified, two factors will control:

"1.—The relative urgency of the uses or purposes for which the product of the plant is utilized.

"2.—The per cent. of the product of the plant utilized in war work, direct or indirect, or work of exceptional or national importance. No plant a very substantial per cent. of whose product is not of exceptional importance can be accorded preferential treatment."

The preference list was prepared after consultation with the Fuel Administrator, the Director General of Railroads, the Chairman of the Shipping Board, and other officials. In effect it is a revision and extension of priority lists prepared by the Fuel Administrator.

Work on the airplane and shipping program is protected, along with the principal industries essential to the equipment and maintenance of the army and navy and the production of foodstuffs. No distinction is made as to the relative importance of the industries listed, and questions of this nature will be determined from time to time by the Requirements Division of the War Industries Board and the various departments involved. Mr. Baruch's verdict will be final in all of the rulings made, subject only to revision by President Wilson.

"In pursuance of a resolution unanimously adopted by the Priorities Board at a meeting held April 6, 1918, the following preference list of classes of industries whose operation as a war measure is of exceptional importance is promulgated and published for the guidance of all agencies of the United States Government in the supply and distribution of coal and coke and in the supply of transportation by rail and water for the movement of coal and coke to said industries.

"The Priorities Commissioner shall, under the direction of and with the approval of the Priorities Board, certify additional classes of industries and also certify individual plants whose operation as a war measure is of exceptional importance, which industries and plants, when so certified, shall be automatically included in this preference list, which shall be amended or revised from time to time by action of the Priorities Board to meet changing conditions.

"No distinction is made between any of the industries or plants which are or may be included in this preference list, and no significance should attach to the order in which the industries or plants appear in the list.

BOARD MAY CHOOSE SCHOOL HEAD SOON

TWO CANDIDATES IN LEAD

Associate Superintendents Shallow and Ettinger Called Most Available Candidates.

The members of the Board of Education, sitting as a Committee of the Whole, will begin next Monday afternoon to consider the question of the selection of a City Superintendent of Schools to succeed William H. Maxwell, who recently resigned. This will be the first conference of the board on the vacancy to be filled.

A canvass of the situation disclosed yesterday that at present the most available candidates for the office were Edward B. Shallow and William Ettinger, Associate Superintendents. Both men were consulted by Mayor Hylan following his election concerning the best methods of carrying out the Mayor's pre-election pledge of abolishing the Gary system. Dr. Shallow, after visiting Gary, Ind., returned to this city a strong antagonist of the plan, and Dr. Ettinger has been interested in a duplicate school plan which is known as the Ettinger system.

From the information available yesterday it appeared that the Shallow supporters claimed the votes of three of the seven members, and were angling for the additional vote to elect their candidate. A woman member of the board was asked yesterday regarding her attitude toward Dr. Shallow, but she said in substance that she was still undecided.

President Arthur S. Somers said that his mind was not made up and he believed that no member of the board was pledged to any candidate. Both he and Mayor Hylan denied yesterday that there was any truth in the published report that President Somers, because of friction with the Mayor concerning the selection of the City Superintendent, had threatened to resign.

Grover Whalen, Secretary to the Mayor, said there had been absolutely no friction between the Mayor and Mr. Somers.

It is believed that the Mayor's desire not to have any "outside expert" in the office almost eliminates from the race Albert Shiels, Superintendent of Schools in Los Angeles, who was for many years connected with the Department of Education of this city.

President Somers, at the meeting of the Board of Education, said yesterday that there were business firms in this city which had refused the offer to establish continuation classes in their places. The matter would be referred, he said, to the proper authorities, who would doubtless take action in regard to it. He asked Acting City Superintendent Straubenmuller what had been done toward excluding from song books used in the public schools patriotic songs of the enemy. Dr. Straubenmuller replied that the song books contained patriotic songs of the different nations. Orders had been given to the Principals to paste paper over the patriotic songs of Germany and Austria-Hungary, which would permit the use of the other songs in the books.

SENATOR STONE STRICKEN.

Has Paralytic Stroke in Car, but Recovers Somewhat.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Senator William J. Stone of Missouri, who suffered a slight cerebral hemorrhage today, is resting easily and his condition is hopeful, according to a statement made tonight by Dr. W. M. Sprigg, his physician. Senator Stone was stricken while on a street car on his way to his office in the Capitol. Dr. Thomas N. Vincent, who was on the car, noticed his collapse and went to his assistance, remaining with him until the car reached the Capitol. Senator Stone first was taken to his office and later to his home.

Dr. Sprigg confirmed Dr. Vincent's diagnosis that the Senator had suffered a cerebral hemorrhage, which partially paralyzed his left side. He at no time never was unconscious.

Senator Stone is 70 years old. He had a severe attack of pleurisy several years ago from which he never recovered, and lost complete use of his leg or arm and it is thought this, coupled with recent hard work, had much to do in bringing on today's attack. As Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations and ranking Democratic member of the Senate Committee on Finance, he has been one of the hardest working members of the Senate.

TIMES WAR REPORTS ARE USED IN SCHOOL

THE NEW YORK TIMES dispatches from Philip Gibbs, at the British battle-front, are daily used in the "discussion of current events," a part of the history course in the South Side High School at Newark, whose pupils number between 1,000 and 1,500. Miss Helen G. Stevenson, the instructor, said yesterday that since the great battle began the dispatches had stimulated an especial interest in the students, though for the last two years Mr. Gibbs's correspondence had been employed in the history class, for the information of the students and as a basis for exercises.

Miss Stevenson added that in her union [illegible] teachers [illegible]

Emphasis laid latterly on our ability to please men who have been used to paying big money to custom tailors, has produced an almost startling demand for our highest priced suits and overcoats.

This is especially gratifying in view of the bigger preparations made for just this thing. We saw it coming. Now it's here. Everybody to-day wants "the most for his money," as well as "the best."

BIG LEAGUES MUST PASS ON NEW CLUB

HEMPSTEAD IS SOUNDED

The first step to get permission for establishing an International League baseball club in the Bronx was taken yesterday when a delegation from the Bronx Board of Trade called on President H. N. Hempstead of the Giants and asked him to waive the rights of the New York National League club to the Bronx territory.

Cyrus P. Miller, former Borough President of the Bronx, and now Fuel Administrator, headed the committee of five, which conferred with Mr. Hempstead. The latter explained to the delegation that the question was one which would have to be decided by the National and American Leagues jointly. He advised the committee to send its application for the Bronx territory at once to both leagues. It is expected that action on the request will be taken in a short time.

President Hempstead did not state what his own views on the question were, and said that he did not care to discuss it one way or another, and he also added that if the proposition to establish minor league ball in the Bronx did not go through, he did not want it said that it was blocked to the New York club.

To invade the Bronx territory, it will be necessary to get a majority vote from the club owners of both the National and American Leagues. Outside of New York there is some opposition to the scheme, and baseball men who discussed the plan yesterday doubted whether the necessary vote could be obtained from the two major leagues. It is known, however, that strong influence will be brought to bear to give Bill Gibson and his associates permission to place a club in that section of the city.

One of the strong arguments of the new International League men is that just as soon as the war is over baseball will start to boom, and the Bronx will be an inviting field for a new outlaw league. If the International League is permitted to place a club there, the territory will be protected for organized ball. This argument, however, is not strongly favored by the major leaguers, as they say that there is not immediate danger of another outlaw league of the same proportions as the Federal League.

Gibson and his Bronx associates are enthusiastic about locating in the Bronx. There is a population of 800,000 to draw from in the Bronx alone, besides the nearby places of New Rochelle, Pelham, White Plains, Mount Vernon, and Bronxville. Now that Newark seems backward about getting into the league again, the International League people are more than anxious to line up the Bronx for one of their clubs.

As far as the two local major league clubs are concerned, it is believed that they would have no objection to minor league opposition in the Bronx, but even if they did come out in favor of it, there is a big question whether they could influence the other club owners to their way of thinking.

The International League club owners will get together again in this city on Friday. By that time it is expected that some definite action will have been taken in Albany on the Sunday baseball question.

MARSANS TO JOIN YANKEES.

Cuban Outfielder Changes His Mind About Retiring.

Armando Marsans, the Cuban outfielder who refused to report at the Yankee training camp, has changed his mind and word was received from Havana yesetrday that the player will rejoin the club here at the end of next week. Marsans came to the Yankees last season from St. Louis in trade for Lee Magee.

GIANTS MAKE SERIES EVEN.

McGraw's Men Wield Bats with a Will and Beat Indians.

NEW ORLEANS, April 10.—Effective pitching by Slim Sallee and Fred Anderson and prolific batting by the Giants' hitters gave McGraw's club a 4-to-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians here today. The New York players made eleven hits off the pitching of Coveleski and Lambeth, the upper end of the batting order hitting the ball freely.

Anderson's pitching was a pleasant surprise to McGraw, for, after he relieved Sallee in the sixth, the Indians didn't get a hit. Two of the four hits they made off Sallee came in the fourth inning and resulted in the Indians' only run. The Giants pounded Coveleski hard, and the pitcher, who last season was the shut-out king of the American League, was the victim of nine hits and issued three passes.

GREENBORO, N. C., April 10.—The Spring series between the New York Yankees and the Boston Braves suffered its first interruption today when rain prevented the game scheduled for this city. The players arrived here early this morning while a shower was in progress, and although the weather cleared later in the day a game was impossible owing to the condition of the field. The tourists left here tonight for Petersburg, Va., the last stop before the Yankees go to New York to open their series with the Brooklyn Club.

Frank Baker left the team today for a short vacation at his home in Trappe, Md., and will rejoin the club at Brooklyn later in the week. Pitchers Bunny Hearne and Jack Scott reported to Manager Stallings here. Scott, who was purchased from the Nashville Club, was injured recently in an automobile accident, and will be unable to pitch for some time.

RAIN ENDS DODGERS' TOUR.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 10.—The final game of the Brooklyn-Boston Red Sox series was spoiled here today by a heavy rain storm and the Dodgers started back to Brooklyn, where they will play their first home exhibition game against the Yankees on Friday.

Manager Robinson's players will come home in good physical trim and the Brooklyn leader is pleased over their good showing against the Red Sox. The club had run into bad weather for the last few days, which may have a bad effect on the good results which were obtained during the training season at Hot Springs.

OPPOSE SUNDAY BASEBALL.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 10.—The Rules Committee of the Assembly which has within its power to give at least temporary life or instant death to Sunday baseball was petitioned tonight by sixty-seven up-State Republican Assemblymen to administer the death blow. The Senate already has passed the bill which would lawfully sanction the sport on Sunday. There was no indication from the Rules Committee tonight as to its action on the measure.

The petition states that the signers believe it is against the best interests of the State, and "especially of the Republican Party at this time to pass any measure legalizing Sunday baseball."

JAPANESE PLAYER EASY FOR COCHRAN

Welker Cochran reserved apparently the best of his billiard play for the final blocks of his 1,800-point match against Koji Yamada at Maurice Daly's Academy yesterday. In both the afternoon and evening games he was the winner by a wide margin, and with the close of the night game he had won the honors of the event by a total score of 1,800 to 1,164. The son of Nippon was able to present only a feeble game, as compared with Cochran's, and in the afternoon was defeated by a score of 300 to 89, and in the evening by 300 to 172. The contest with Yamada having been finished, Cochran will begin his 1,800-point match with young Jake Schaefer this afternoon.

During the first two days of the match against Yamada, Cochran was struggling along with only mediocre billiards. He could not get into good stroke, try as he would, and his averages were disappointing. Yesterday, on the other hand, Cochran at one bound went from ordinary billiards to the topmost achievements. His afternoon average was 42 6-7, and he just missed making it an even 50. In the evening, he set a mark of 83 3-9. Both of these are commendable, and more nearly reflect the skill for which Cochran is famed than his earlier performances.

Twice, yesterday, he made runs that mounted beyond the hundred mark. In the afternoon, his best cluster came in the second inning, when he made a run of 132. In the evening game, his high run was 139, the highest that was made in the entire match.

Of more interest, however, from the point of view of the close student of billiards was the consistency with which Cochran clicked off the carroms. In the evening game, for instance, he never once fell below a count of double figures, and only three of his runs were less than 20.

Yamada, who has all along been out of stroke, gave for one fleeting moment in the evening a glimpse of what he really can accomplish in balkline billiards. His run of 114 in the second inning was a cluster ably put together, and this was a source of keen gratification to the Japanese, for no one has been more disappointed in his play than himself. He could not, however, hold up to the face of fast billiards which was necessary to make even a close score against Cochran, and his innings, following the run of 114, were tinged with the same sort of ineffectiveness that has marked his play all during the match.

The scores:

Afternoon Game.

Cochran—55 139 10 14 0 59 0 3 20. Total, 300; average, 33 3-9; high runs, 139, 59, and 55.
Yamada—2 114 4 15 3 0 23 11. Total, 172; average, 21 5-8; high runs, 114 and 23.

TO RUN PREAKNESS MAY 15.

Conflict Is Thereby Avoided with Kentucky Derby.

There will be no conflict between the running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, and the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico. The Derby will be run at the Louisville, Ky., track Saturday, May 11, and the Preakness at Pimlico the following Wednesday, May 15. This arrangement will give owners of thoroughbreds who are looking for the opportunity, a chance to enter their colts for both events. Last year both races were held on the same day, making it necessary for owners to choose between the events.

Kenneth B. Alexander's Escoba and W. S. Kilmer's Sun Briar will be two of the leading horses in the two races. The owners of these thoroughbreds have already engaged traveling facilities for the animals, it is understood.

The Pimlico meeting will close on May 17 and on May 16 the local season will get under way at Jamaica. The decision of the officials of the Maryland Jockey Club, therefore, in selecting May 15 for the Preakness Stakes will give added financial returns, as many local admirers of the thoroughbreds will be able to make the trip to Baltimore for this race and return to New York for the opening of the metropolitan season. About 140 nominations have been received for the Preakness, including the premier three-year-olds of the country.

BOXING BILL FAILS, IS RECONSIDERED

Senate Will Vote Again on Measure to Permit Fee for Amateur Bouts.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 10.—Senator Robert F. Lawson's bill which would take amateur boxing contests out of the restrictions now imposed by law on prize fighting and permit admission fees to be charged, was defeated in the Senate tonight, 23 to 16.

The vote, however, was reconsidered and the bill will again be pressed for passage probably tomorrow, when five Democrats absent at tonight's session are expected to vote in favor of the measure and enable its passage.

The penal law which makes it a misdemeanor now to have connection in any way with prize fighting, would not apply to amateur bouts of not more than four rounds of three minutes duration with five ounce gloves, under the Lawson bill.

The measure, however, provides that amateur bouts must be sanctioned by the Amateur Athletic Union, or the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes.

'GO FIGHT THE BOCHE.'

Nevada Governor's Advice to Willard and Fulton—Reno Bars Bout.

RENO, Nev., April 10.—In reply to a query from Eastern papers asking if Willard and Fulton would be permitted to fight in Reno on July 4, Governor Boyle sent the following reply this morning:

"Willard and Fulton cannot fight in Nevada on July 4 or any other date. They have my unqualified permission, however, to go to France and fight the Boche any time they are ready."

SANTA FE, N. M., April 10.—"The Willard-Fulton fight cannot be held in New Mexico while I am Governor," Governor Lindsey today answered, when asked what he would do if permission to stage the bout in this State, on July 4, were asked of him.

FORDHAM POSTPONES GAME

Because of the inclement weather, which made Fordham Field a mud puddle, the Columbia-Fordham baseball game was postponed yesterday afternoon. It was to have been the first of a three-game series between the old rivals.

It looks now as though Columbia might have no big game this week, for yesterday the Blue and White management received word that Colgate would be unable to meet Coach Coakley's men on South Field Saturday afternoon. So far Columbia has obtained no team to fill the vacancy.

Lewis-Stecher Bout on April 26.

Final arrangements for the wrestling match between Ed (Strangler) Lewis of Lexington, Ky., and Joe Stecher of Nebraska were completed yesterday. The men will meet in a match at Madison Square Garden Friday, April 26. This will mark the third mat meeting between Lewis and Stecher, their previous two matches having ended without a decisive victory for either grappler.

SEES IN WEBB BILL BOON TO EXPORTERS

TO MEET FOREIGN RIVALRY

Proposed Law in President's Hands Expected to Meet After-War Conditions.

The Webb-Pomerene bill permitting export combinations in overseas trade was described yesterday at the monthly luncheon of the American Manufacturers' Export Association, held at the Hotel Biltmore, as putting the United States in a most advantageous position to meet international rivalry after the war, and as an effective means of combating in foreign markets the German cartel system, under which the commercial and financial influence of the empire prospered abroad prior to 1914.

The Webb bill, as it is generally known, is now before President Wilson for his signature, and as the President has been insistent for the passage by Congress of such a measure the bill is expected to become law within the next few days.

Gilbert H. Montague, counsel for the association, who had been active in obtaining the enactment of the bill to allow exporters to combine without fear of violating the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws, told of the great benefits to accrue from the right about to be given to shippers to employ "unified tactics" in meeting competition in foreign markets.

Permits Exporters to Combine.

"The bill as we have got it," Mr. Montague said, "represents a really substantial achievement. It will allow two or more exporters to combine for foreign trade without infringing the anti-trust laws. We have got to regard this as an after-the-war measure. At the present time, our manufacturers are in the position of making the goods, throwing down the finished products, and having them grabbed up in a twinkling. Under such circumstances, it can hardly be expected that the manufacturers will reach out for foreign trade. The time, however, will surely come when the need for overseas markets for finished goods will be appreciated, and then we may expect to see the Webb law come to the aid of exporters."

Mr. Montague said the law would be found helpful in certain circumstances, to the larger concerns already engaged in foreign trade, and particularly so to the smaller manufacturers. There was nothing in the bill about to become law, he asserted, to upset usual business methods.

"With all proper safeguards against abuse," Mr. Montague continued, "the Webb-Pomerene bill permits, in foreign markets, a degree of free action to which the American export trade heretofore has been a stranger. Without violation of the anti-trust laws, and without any need, therefore, for the Webb-Pomerene bill, a considerable volume of American export trade has already been attained, and will continue to be carried on. Every one has realized, however, that if certain legitimate methods and arrangements, which apparently were forbidden by the anti-trust laws, might be permitted in the American export trade, still greater volume and benefit might be obtained."

Newton Reassures Exporters.

Collector of the Port, Byron R. Newton, who was one of the speakers, said:

"You need have no concern regarding the attitude of Washington toward business. You need have no concern as to the intelligent regard and interest and understanding of our President and those who are in control of affairs in Washington with reference to American business. It was my good fortune to be in Washington through the early stages of the war, and I know something of the task. I know how it was handled, and I know of the solicitude of the President for the business of this country and the way in which it would be affected.

"It seems to me that the course of the manufacturers of this country is very clear now. I have spoken of the new world that is coming. It is going to be a hungry world; a world that needs relief and replenishment, and from our bounty of course, the relief must come very largely at first. So it seems to me that if I were working out a motto for the guidance and policy of foreign trade, I would say, in looking into the future, adopt the Golden Rule, and add to that Yankee enterprise and push, and you will be pretty nearly right, because we must go down to the blue water; we must get back to our former prestige that we held from the War of 1812 until the civil war. The world is going to demand that; the world is coming to us—this new world, and it is just a question as to whether we sluggishly permit them to come after our help, or whether we carry it to them."

O. K. Davis, Secretary of the National Foreign Trade Council, outlined the work of the big foreign trade convention which is to be held in Cincinnati next week.

Women on G. O. P. Committees.

Jacob A. Livingston, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Kings County Republican Committee, announced yesterday amendments to the committee's by-laws providing for equal representation by women with men on Assembly District committees in Brooklyn. It was held to be impossible for women to be represented on the County Committee until after the enrollment at the Fall primaries.

LAND ARMY PRAISED.

President Wilson has expressed his appreciation of the Woman's Land Army of America in a personal letter which was sent out yesterday from its headquarters at 32 Fifth Avenue. It reads:

The White House,

To the Executive Committee of the Woman's Land Army, Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers, Chairman:

My dear Mrs. Rogers: I am gratified to hear of the plan of the Woman's Land Army to help increase the food supply of our country and the Allies through enrolling active and patriotic young women in self-sustaining groups or units to aid in cultivating crops where the farmers have need of them. I trust that our farmers, like the farmers of Great Britain and Canada, will avail themselves of this aid to the fullest extent practicable, and that the response of our loyal young women to this need, wherever it exists, will be generous and complete.

Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

"The Land Army has been organized in eighteen States," Mrs. Rogers said yesterday, "and is in process of establishment in twenty others. Women wishing to enroll for farm work can do so most promptly by writing for application blanks to the Woman's Committees of their own State Council of Defense."

GALE DRIVES SHIPS ASHORE IN THE BAY

WARSHIPS DOUBLE ANCHORS

A sixty-mile easterly gale, blowing directly from the sea, pushed a tremendous tide against the whole length of the south shore of Staten Island late yesterday afternoon, submerging piers from four to six feet, inundating streets and business property, and tearing several small vessels from anchorages and throwing them ashore. It was estimated that the property loss would reach $100,000.

The breaking of the storm of wind, rain, snow, and sleet upon the Staten Island barrier moderated its effect on the Narrows and the upper bay.

The first vessel to go aground was the four-masted schooner Ada Brown, with a cargo from Porto Rico, valued at $175,000. Finding it impossible to reach a Manhattan pier during the storm, the Captain of the Ada Brown sought safety by putting out two anchors two miles from Tompkinsville docks. Although the vessel draws twenty feet of water the gale broke her anchorage and carried the schooner broadside to within 200 yards of the shore, where she grounded. Tugs were standing by and the crew were at the pumps, as the schooner was leaking last night, but was thought to be in no danger of going to pieces because of the sandy bottom.

Six other ships, several of them sailers, escaped a similar risk by running to better anchorage off Bay Ridge. Three warships held their ground at Staten Island, but were forced to put out extra anchors. At Tottenville two Pennsylvania coal barges, loaded, went aground. They are being protected by tugs. At Great Kills a fishing schooner and three small boats were thrown upon the beach and wrecked.

All along the waterfront from Simonson Avenue, at Clifton, to Fort Wadsworth, a distance of two miles, the piers were under water, and the ships which had been loading or discharging cargo had to be moved to outside anchorage last night to prevent them pounding to pieces. In Clifton the water was four feet deep in the streets, and boats were used to move about.

Summer hotels and bungalows at South Beach and Midland Beach were damaged severely. The flood swept over the first floors of most of these places. Long stretches of the new concrete walks at both beaches were undermined by the tide.

The storm put the electric lights out of service at Huguenot, New Dorp, and Princes Bay, and the police announced that telegraph and telephone wires were down there and in other towns. At 10 o'clock last night it was said the tide had reached eleven feet above normal high tide, the highest for years.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., April 10.—Row boats were used in Ocean Avenue tonight at high tide. The crest came at 8:30, after which it subsided a little after threatening to inundate several buildings. A small house belonging to Edward Brehm, on the water edge, was undermined. Tonight's blow was the hardest since the memorable storms of the Winter of 1913-14, when the ocean front was all but washed away.

MALONE JOINS HILLQUIT.

Ex-Collector to Assist in Defending Publishers of The Masses.

A statement sent out last night by the National Civil Liberties Bureau of 70 Fifth Avenue said that ex-Collector of the Port Dudley Field Malone would be associated with Morris Hillquit in the defense when the trial of Max Eastman, editor of the suppressed magazine, The Masses, and six of the associate editors, begins next Monday morning before Judge A. N. Hand of the Federal District Court. The defendants are charged with criminal conspiracy in violaton of the Espionage act.

Besides Max Eastman those under indictment are Merrill Rogers, business manager of the suppressed magazine; Floyd Dell, managing editor; Arthur Young, cartoonist; Josephine Bell, and John Reed, writers, and H. J. Glinterkamp. Reed and Glinterkamp are not now in this country.

SEND PROTEST TO MAYOR.

The New York City Woman Suffrage Party yesterday asked Mayor Hylan to reconsider any intention he might entertain of abolishing the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the Board of Health. In a letter to the Mayor, Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the organization, said:

It has been reported to the officers of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party that in carrying out your commendable program of economy in the administration of the city's affairs, you are thinking of abolishing the Bureau of Child Hygiene of which Dr. S. Josephine Baker is director.

If this is your intention, as Chairman of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party, I would like to express to you the real concern felt by the members of this organization over such a move, which seems inadvisable at this time. The Bureau of Child Hygiene, as a section of the Health Department, seems to us as women, as voting citizens, and as patriots, to be vitally important, since it plays a large part in child conservation. This bureau, the first to be established anywhere, has served as a model for all the large cities of the country, and the reduction of our infant mortality to a point below that of any large city in the world, is due to the excellent work of the bureau.

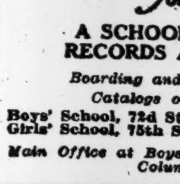

Dr. Julia Lathrop is urging the establishment of such a bureau in all the cities of the United States as a first step in the national campaign which she is organizing as a war measure for the saving of child life. The Woman Suffrage Party therefore believes that the services of Dr. Baker and her bureau are valuable and we urge you to retain both for the benefit of the children in New York City.

The Government Wants Drugs.

Drug and Chemical Markets will say today that Government requirements continue to absorb the bulk of many leading commodities, causing difficulty in filling orders for the trade. Bismuth preparations are higher. Mercury declined $5 a flask. Botanical drugs are firm, particularly barks and berries, but no important price changes have occurred in the last week. Seeds and herbs are in active demand. Celery and sage are higher. Spices showed fractional price gains, and violent fluctuations are predicted during the next few months owing to the unusual conditions governing the market. Essential oils are firm, and many sharp advances have taken place this week.

Ready-to-Wear at Retail.

Though the weather of the last few days has not been particularly favorable for Spring shopping in the local department stores, it is reported that sales are keeping up very well. It seems that dresses, which during the earlier part of the season were not as popular as suits, are coming back strong and some merchants predict that dress sales will shortly be greater than suit sales. The medium-priced garments with lasting qualities are generally preferred. It is said also that the general ready-to-wear trade in the stores so far in April of this year is ahead of the same period a year ago, though in most cases a somewhat different character of merchandise is selling.

No Break in Gray Goods Prices.

The lack of real snap to buying in the local gray goods market is in no way affecting prices, and yesterday they continued rock firm on the bases established on Tuesday. Twenty cents was paid for April-June deliveries of 39-inch 68-72s, while for April-May shipment 39-inch 56-44s and 38½-inch 64-60s were sold at 15¼ and 18¼ cents, respectively. Mills are now asking 17 cents for spot and nearby 38-inch 60-52s, while 60-48s in the same width are being held at 16½ cents. The selling of 40-inch 2.85-yard sheetings at 31 cents was again the feature of the coarse goods end of the trade, though this time they brought that figure for June and July deliveries. Printcloth prices closed this way:

Gingham Dresses Again?

Gingham dresses for women are said to be gaining a stronger following as the season progresses. Though at first there seemed to be some fear among many buyers that these garments had been pretty well played out last Summer, now it is said that they show real confidence in practically nothing else but gingham for wash dresses. Consequently, many manufacturers in this city have found that buyers will take a normal quantity of ginghams, but, as to other wash fabrics, they are inclined to place only small orders, waiting to see just what the season is going to develop.

Not Worried About Pearl Sales.

There was not much disposition in the local pearl and gem trade yesterday to regard seriously the "story" printed under a Paris date line and telling of the alleged sale of $50,000,000 worth of pearls to German interests by French jewelers, through Swiss agencies. This is what one trade authority said about it: "It would have practically no effect from a trade point of view, even if true. I doubt the report because, about a year ago, gems were being sent out of Germany in order to increase the supply of ready cash, and the chances are that it is still unpatriotic there to spend money for gems of any kind instead of war loans. It was reported on very reliable authority that about a year and a half ago German and Austrian interests were in the Amsterdam market buying large diamonds—too big for use here—as investments, and in order to have taxable assets that could easily be concealed. This could hardly be done with pearls, as they cannot be cut up."

Anticipating Fall Conditions.

Retail merchants who have come to market already for Fall coats and suits for women are not alone in their efforts to anticipate higher prices or any scarcity which may develop later on. It is said that there are quite a few women here and there who have bought heavy Winter coats during the last month or so, which they are putting away to keep for use next Fall and Winter. This practice is, of course, not general among women, but the few cases that have occurred are considered as significant of the widespread feeling that prices will be high and the assortment very limited later on.

Questionnaire to Cloak Trades.

A questionnaire has been sent by the War Department in Washington to manufacturers in the women's wear industries which is designed to supply detailed information of the capacity of these industries to manufacture uniforms for soldiers. The questionnaire must be filled out by all manufacturers, whether or not they want Government work. Eugene Lesinsky, General Manager of the Cloak, Suit, and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Association, sent the questionnaire to all association members yesterday with a letter explaining that "this is a war measure, so please give the matter your immediate attention."

Children's Clothes Sought.

Local manufacturers of children's clothes report that the market in this city for the last month has been unusually active. Rompers of many different designs are in great demand, and it is said that the most durable materials, irrespective of price, are wanted. In many quarters it is held that the call for these garments is greater than the supply under present conditions. Consequently, most manufacturers are said to be devoting the greater part of their efforts to the problem of increasing their output rather than to developing new business.

Worried About Deliveries.

Many large local manufacturers of neckwear for women report that they are more concerned just now with the matter of maintaining their deliveries up to schedule than they are with further increasing the amount of orders on their books. Skilled labor in this industry is said not to be any too plentiful, and it is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain certain materials. On top of this, the demand for all sorts of neckwear is said to be unusually large.

Old Shoes Coming in Fast.

About ten days or so ago one of the big local stores notified its patrons, through its advertisements, that a credit of 50 cents toward the purchase of a pair of new shoes would be given for every pair of old shoes brought in, preferably in wearable condition These shoes, it was said, would be sent to French and Belgian refugees. So far more than 2,000 pairs of old shoes have been brought in by customers, some of whom have come fifty to one hundred miles to "help the good work along," and a shipment of 500 pairs is already headed for Europe. The record individual offering to date was made by a man who brought in twenty-two pairs, some of which had scarcely been worn. One woman brought in eighteen pairs, and accepted credits against them in the purchase of five pairs of new shoes. One interesting feature of the plan is that the new shoes do not necessarily have to be purchased at the time the old ones are brought in. Careful records are kept in the shoe department of the store, and a customer may let several months elapse between the time of his or her contribution and the purchase of the new shoes without losing the fifty-cent credit on the latter.

BUSINESS NOTES.

From April 29, the W. J. Crouch Company, steel exporters of 253 Broadway, will be located in larger and better equipped offices at 68 William Street, corner of Cedar, where they have taken the entire fifteenth floor. The change was made necessary by the rapid expansion of the business.

Dry Goods, a well-known trade paper, will in the future be known as Dry Goods and Apparel, a department devoted to ready-to-wear having been established. Alfred Fantl, the resident buyer, has become associated with this publication and has been elected Vice President of the corporation owning it. Other officers of the corporation are: President, A. C. Jaegerhuber; Secretary, S. E. Ramseyer, and Treasurer, E. A. Peris.

FUR AUCTION PROGRESSES.

The total sales for the first half of the annual Spring auction of raw furs here fell just short of $2,000,000, and this figure would have been exceeded considerably had it been possible yesterday to complete the selling schedule. A fair-sized part of the silver fox collection was held over from the previous day, and this made it impossible to reach the badger and ermine offerings without holding a night session.

Bidding for the silver fox skins put under the hammer was as active as on Tuesday, and some good prices were obtained. The medium-grade skins were again the most sought by buyers. It had been thought that buyers might lose interest in these skins yesterday, the bulk of the collection already having been disposed of, but this proved not to be the case. In fact, the spreading of this selling over two days made quite a hit with the buyers, and it is probable that future lots of "silvers" will be disposed of in this way at the local sale. These skins are the slowest selling of all, being offered in ones and twos unless the quality is not all that it might be.

Mink was the real feature of yesterday's selling, previous trade predictions that this fur was "coming back" being borne out to a considerable extent by the fact that the best one sold to C. G. Gunther's Sons of this city for $10.80. These predictions were further verified by the advances shown by yesterday's prices over those obtained at the January sale. Northern mink was up 15 per cent. and Southwestern mink advanced 25 per cent. The smaller skins were the most actively bid for, due to their marten-like coloring, and some of the small pelts brought nearly as much as the large ones. These skins will be much used in Summer fur garments, and they are well known for their cold-resisting qualities. Among the other buyers of mink were Perlberg & Cooper, Milton Schreiber & Co., N. Sobel, the Ganss Fur Company and Stein & Rosenthal.

Features of the general sale so far include the fact that the larger manufacturers are nearly as active buyers as the dealers, and that there is apparently little speculative buying being done. Both of these things are taken to confirm earlier reports of shortages of the season's most popular furs, as well as that the manufacturers need all the skins they can obtain in order to meet the heavy demands that are being made on them by the retail trade as a result of active consumer buying.

Further subscriptions to Liberty Bonds during the day brought the 3 P. M. total for the fur trade up to $1,919,800. These large purchases were recorded: H. Gabbe & Brother, $25,000; M. Gutschneider, $12,000; A. N. Leventhal, $10,000, and Jacob Babrow & Brother, $8,000. There were several additional subscriptions of $5,000 each.

Today's morning session will begin at 9:30 A. M. After selling the badger and ermine put over from yesterday, Auctioneer J. Gordon Noakes will put these pelts under the hammer: House cats, kolinsky, marmot, American, Australian, Tasmanian and ringtail opossum, marten, Russian sable, squirrel, flying squirrel and beaver.

WOOL TRADING STOPPED.

BOSTON, April 10.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"Chief interest in the wool trade is in the offer to the Government of all the wool on hand or in transit which is unsold. Since April 5 trading has stopped because of this action of the trade. It is felt that the Government will accept the offer. Up to April 5 big sales of wool had been made because of tremendous demand for material for civilian purposes. Lines of domestic wool owned by large holders have been much depleted.

"The woolen goods situation has been upset by the commandeering order of the Government. Little change is expected in the woolen goods market for some time to come. There will be little available production for ordinary distribution.

"During the last week the only change in the cotton goods market has been the comparatively small trading. Altogether the cotton goods market may be characterized as a runaway market. Prices appear to be at or very near the top. The demand for goods is much smaller than it actually appears to be, and existing conditions create high prices."

SEIZE CHLORATE OF POTASH

50,000 Pounds Was Stored Without Permit Downtown.

Acting under orders from Mayor Hylan officials of the Fire Department and the Bureau of Fire Prevention yesterday seized more than 50,000 pounds of chlorate of potash, the property of the Commercial Warehouse, 212 Duane Street, of which E. Russell Valentine is proprietor. Part of the chemical was stored in the upper floors of the buildings at 300 to 306 Washington Street, 176 to 196 Reade Street, 187 to 189 West Street, and 202 to 220 Duane Street.

According to the officials who made the seizure the company had been storing the potash unlawfully, not having received a permit from the city. It was said that the company was ordered last week to remove the chemical because of the danger of explosion, but did not do so. Fire Department repair trucks drew up in front of the buildings and the potash was removed to scows of the Street Cleaning Department. Pending a further investigation it will be held on scows down the bay.

Mayor Hylan yesterday wrote as follows to Fire Commissioner Drennan asking him to conduct an immediate investigation to determine whether explosives or chemicals prohibited by law are stored within the city limits:

"I want an immediate investigation made by you and the Fire Prevention Bureau of all warehouses, storage places, and docks throughout the city to ascertain if there are explosives or dangerous chemicals prohibited by law stored within the city limits.

"Wherever these explosives are found I direct that they be taken out of the city at once. If you will request the Police Commissioner he will gladly cooperate with you in detecting the storage and the transportation of explosives and dangerous chemicals in the city."

Lend Him A Hand

going over the top, his gun in hand, his jaw set, his heart on fire. It is the most dramatic moment in the life of this soldier—and in the life of this nation.

His heart and mind are set on one thing—VICTORY—victory over an enemy who stands for acts and ideas which this soldier despises—which he is ready to give his life to destroy.

We here at home hate these things too. We are pledged to their destruction—to our last dollar and our last man. But this soldier can actually—get-his-hands-on-them—and root them out of the world forever—if we will lend him a hand.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Lloyd George's careful review of the progress of the huge struggle now going on in France cleared the atmosphere of rumors of huge British reserves held in waiting for a counteroffensive, and of opposing stories, less widely circulated, of a great numercial superiority enjoyed by the Germans. His speech was the clearest exposition of the present status of the interrupted drive that has appeared, and was read with the closest attention without, however, producing any change in the attitude which the public has been holding toward the probable effect of the military crisis on the value of securities. On the Stock Exchange the same tendencies that have marked every session for several days past were again in evidence. There was little business, total transactions falling short of 200,000 shares, and prices moved for the most part fractionally. Interest among traders was concentrated upon Distillers, Marine preferred, and Steel.

In Marine the familiar effort to attract speculative interest through the circulation of stories purporting to forecast the board's action upon a further reduction of the accumulated preferred dividend has centred attention upon the meeting scheduled to be held this afternoon. It has been predicted with a considerable degree of certainty that the company will pay another installment on the 72 per cent. still due stockholders, but in view of the uncertainty of what the company will realize from vessels now operated for Government account the prediction has not been accepted at its face value. On active business that made Marine the market leader the preferred sold up to 94 yesterday, closing with a net gain of ⅞.

The Steel Corporation's decrease in unfilled tonnage, reported yesterday as of March 31, was not unexpected. The total on the company's books on that date was 9,056,000 tons, a decrease of 232,000 tons from the total as of Feb. 28, and of 2,655,000 tons from the corresponding day in 1917. With the return of conditions in the fuel and transportation situation to something approaching normal, for war times, the deliveries have been speeded up, and account for the decrease in unfilled orders. Because the period covered embraced the months of extremely unfavorable weather the quarterly earnings statement of the Lackawana Steel Company caused favorable comment in the financial district. After allowance for the Federal taxes the Lackawanna earned $8.50 per share for the quarter ended March 31, against $9.85 reported a year ago.

LONDON TRADERS GLOOMY.

LONDON, April 10.—The stock market opened somewhat gloomily today, being influenced by the weather, the war news, and the Man Power bill, which tended to restrict business. Fears were expressed that the raising of the age limit for military service would not only deplete the staff of the Stock Exchange, but virtually dry up business all around.

First prices were easier. Publication of the War Office report gave a more cheerful tone to the market, which was steadier at the close, although without much recovery. Spanish bonds were strong at 119.

STEEL BOOKINGS FALL OFF.

Unfilled Orders for 9,056,404 Tons as of March 31.

The United States Steel Corporation had unfilled orders for 9,056,404 tons on its books as of March 31, a decline of 232,049 tons during the month. In the preceding month forward contracts receded 189,400 tons. On Dec. 31, 1917, the advance business aggregated 9,381,718 tons and on March 31, 1917, the books showed 11,711,644 tons. The largest showing in the corporation's history was on April 31 last year when the bookings amounted to 12,183,083 tons.

The decline during March this year, as disclosed in the monthly statement yesterday, was not considered a surprise in the trade. Domestic orders have been restricted since the Government became a heavy buyer. While new bookings were checked somewhat by the curtailment of commercial demand, shipments last month presumably gained considerable headway over February's total, due to the better weather and transportation conditions. Increased shipments worked to lower the amount of orders on the books.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

J. P. Morgan & Co. have mailed a circular letter to New York banks and trust companies, requesting that those who have some of the New York, New Haven & Hartford's $44,000,000 of one-year notes, payable April 15, for collection, send in schedules, pending information from the Government as to the manner of payment of these notes.

The National Trade Acceptance Bureau is about to begin publication of The Trade Acceptance Journal.

The Equitable Trust Company has published a booklet on "Acceptances as an Investment."

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Lackawanna Steel's Quarter.

The Lackawanna Steel Company's quarterly report is significant as the first statement issued by one of the larger steel producers covering the period of the Winter's worst weather. The earnings, issued yesterday, failed to show that deep snows, transportation tieups, and difficulties in obtaining adequate supplies of fuel and raw material cut heavily into income. In the three months ended March 31 the net revenue, after deducting Federal taxes, was $3,759,987, a decline of $608,562 from the total in the same period last year. The reservation for depreciation and mine extinguishment was $42,906 less than a year before, and the balance for dividends was $2,996,747. This was equal to $8.54 a share of stock, compared with $9.85 earned in the first quarter of 1917. It is worth noting that after allowing for presumably heavy Federal war taxes the net before depreciation and charges was $512,400 larger than in the initial quarter of 1916, which was considered highly favorable at the time.

The St. Paul Situation.

The news that the St. Paul, for lack of current funds, must sell some $10,000,000 of equipment trust certificates unless it gets a speedy release of some of the rental owed to it by the Government, was accompanied by further reports of the imminent passing of the semi-annual dividends and by selling pressure against the preferred stock yesterday which carried it down 2⅜ points. Action on the dividends should normally have been taken by the Directors at the January meeting, but both the February and the March meetings have gone by with no decision. So far from there being foundation for the report that this month the Directors will finally pass the dividends, a man well acquainted with St. Paul affairs yesterday pointed out that the only excuse for such long delay on the Directors' part might be that they have good hope of retaining the dividends, and that if they had had to pass them they would have done so in January and had it over with.

Rumor and Marine.

The International Mercantile Marine Company has for a long time had the bad luck to form, apparently, a particularly shining mark for rumors of the speculative sort. It has been unusually inviting in recent months because of the possibilities created by the still unpaid 72 per cent. of back dividends on its preferred stock, combined with the known fact that the company's earnings, even with its whole fleet commandeered, have been sufficient to justify one payment on this back dividend and hopes of another. Yesterday stories were rife all through the Street about another payment on the back dividends, and found enough belief to cause the stock to move up a point and a fraction. There is this much truth, at least, in the reports: There will be a Directors' meeting today. But whether or not they will take any action at all on the back dividends is another story.

The Shipping Stocks' Position.

As a matter of fact, any action on the part of Mercantile Marine Directors is fraught with difficulties, because this company is suffering in a peculiarly aggravated fashion from the trouble which afflicts all the big shipping companies nowadays. They are all making money, but none of them knows how much, and they cannot find out. Their position was never better secured, the prestige of the shipping industry was never higher than it is now; but they are so completely under control of the British and American Governments, and their accounts are so inextricably interwoven with the bookkeeping of Government bureaus and departments, that they cannot tell where they stand, and, when prudent business men do not know just where they stand, their instinct generally is to conserve capital and make no unnecessary disbursements.

Cotton's Tactical Position.

"Don't pay any attention to this market," said one old cotton man yesterday. "In the old days this market ruled the roost, and when they put the price down here all the Southern markets had to follow suit. That was because the Southern grower had to sell his cotton for what he could get to pay his debts. Now they put the price down here, but the Southern markets don't pay any attention. They don't have to sell, but we do have to buy, and they know it, and they're determined to make us come to them. Cotton used to be a buyers' market; now it's a sellers' market. That's all there is to it, and the fact that the buyers are out of this one for a few days won't make any difference."

Sterling "Peg" in Disuse.

Foreign exchange brokers consider that 4.76 7-16 is the "pegged" price for sterling cables. That is, when the rate touches this figure in the offered quotation, supporting orders are immediately forthcoming, and continue in the market until the quotation rises. A broker said yesterday that support buying had not occurred for ten days because offerings have been sufficiently light to be easily absorbed. The rate has held steady at 4.7645.

Japan's Trade Position.

Since the beginning of January the balance of trade has been against Japan, the record of the last year being reversed. The final returns show that Japan's total trade for 1917 amounted to 2,638,797,476 yen, of which 1,603,005,033 yen represented exports and the remaining 1,035,792,443 yen imports. Thus the excess of exports over imports was 567,212,590 yen, as compared with 371,646,208 yen in 1916. The steady ebb in the volume of Japan's exports during the last three months indicates the improbability of anything like this excess of exports for the current year and a general decline in Japan's foreign trade, according to advices from Tokio. Exports show a falling off to the extent of 19 per cent., and there has been a decline of about 22 per cent. in imports, owing chiefly to difficulties in obtaining iron and steel and raw cotton. The biggest decline in Japan's trade is noted in the case of the United States. Japan's total exports to this country last year amounted to 478,000,000 yen, but if the Government restrictions are carried into effect the exports are likely to be reduced to about half, according to a Tokio correspondent, who points out that in the event that the American regulations restrict imports without touching exports, this would, on the basis of last year's figures, leave an unfavorable balance of some 120,000,000 yen in Japan's trade with the United States.

UNION TANK LINE EARNINGS.

Former Standard Oil Subsidiary Has Net Income of $3,709,516.

The Union Tank Line Company, a former Standard Oil subsidiary, reports net earnings of $3,709,516 in 1917, an increase of $1,627,750 over the preceding year. In terms of the stock the net was equal to $30.91 a share, compared with $17.34 in 1916. The report issued yesterday said that Federal income and excess profits taxes to be paid on the earnings would amount to $859,918.

The Swan & Finch Company, another quondam constituent of the old Standard of New Jersey, announced in its report that a special meeting of stockholders would be held on May 1 to authorize an increase of the capital from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000. Of the increase, $500,000 is to be offered to share owners at par, the proceeds to be used in expanding the company's business. The income from operations in 1917 amounted to $203,468, from which $121,919 was written off as loss on the sale of a plant for the production of fish oil and fertilizer. The balance of $81,549 was $18,487 more than the year before.

The Liberty Loan Smile

YOU seldom see "Jack ashore" nowadays. He dropped in a few days ago "to see how the Liberty Loan campaign was going." We told him it would be oversubscribed. He left, smiling.

He is playing his part in this great war, and a most important part it is. He convoys our soldiers, and our vast shipments of ammunition and supplies, safely across the sea. He is up and aloft in the darkness and storm, watching for the glint of a periscope that betrays the presence of those sneaking pirates, the submarines.

Tense and alert, keen for the fight that may come at any moment of the night or day, cool and resourceful when the torpedo strikes or the shells come screaming over the water, "Jack afloat" upholds the glorious traditions of the American Navy.

GOVERNMENT PLANS LARGER GUN WORKS

INCREASE IN INGOT OUTPUT

Considerable Time Must Elapse Before Commercial Consumption Will Be Encouraged.

The impetus applied to the United States Government's war preparations by the German advance in Picardy is finding marked reflection in the steel trade. As the result of increased demands upon the mills observers of conditions predict that it will be a considerable time before commercial steel consumption will receive encouragement.

"The most significant development of the week," The Iron Age says, "is the definite shaping of Government plans for the immediate building of larger gun works than the United States has today and for a corresponding increase in the manufacture of the largest shells at new plants. The new artillery program will include many 16-inch howitzers mounted on trucks. Their manufacture is likely to be undertaken by a great interest not now engaged on guns, and deliveries are not counted on before late 1919 or early 1920.

"This first week of the country's second year in the war is thus marked by the clearest indications yet given that American steel output will at length be so far taken up by the Government and its allies as to leave little for so-called ordinary uses either at home or abroad."

The name of the company which is expected to undertake the manufacture of the big cannon could not be learned yesterday. Supposition pointed toward the Steel Corporation, which is engaged in making large forgings and has not yet entered the ordnance field, but confirmation was not obtained.

"The vast enlargement of the nation's offensive preparations that has come in the fortnight," The Iron Age continued, "has already stirred the machine tool trade. Great activity is looked for also from the doubling of the output of various shell plants by Government order and the call for large numbers of motor trucks to be sent at once to France.

"Steel mills have been under pressure from Washington in the last week in an effort to have January and February shortages made up, particularly those in plates. The mills have had the help of a better car supply, which in the Pittsburgh district has been especially fortunate in view of the large proportion of output required by the Government. The leading producer there has turned nearly 90 per cent. of its recent production into Government and war contract channels, and several plants in the same district that lately have given 60 to 75 per cent. of their production to such business are now considerably exceeding these figures.

"Great Britain's call for 300,000 tons of ship steel is growing more urgent, and for part of this special consideration has been ordered. A large order of shell steel for the Allies is also awaiting distribution.

"Every week's delay in the placing of the 100,000 cars that have long been scheduled at Washington increases the chances of repeating next Winter the disastrous traffic breakdown of January and February. Should these orders be given out tomorrow, weeks would be required for the manufacture of car appliances on which plants partly idle should now be at work. Precious time is being lost without good reason.

"Steel ingot production in March is estimated at more than 3,525,000 tons, on the basis of returns from twenty-nine companies making 85 to 90 per cent. of the total. This represents an increase of 30 per cent. over the average for January and February, and is parallel with the remarkable recovery in pig-iron production."

SIMS APPEALS TO SHIP MEN.

BOSTON, April 10.—Copies of a letter from Vice Admiral William S. Sims, commander of the United States naval forces in European waters, urging workers to do their utmost to speed up ship construction are to be placed tomorrow in the pay envelopes of the 15,000 men employed in the shipbuilding plants at Quincy and Squantum.

The letter is addressed to Joseph W. Powell, Vice President of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company, and the writer declares that the matter of supplying more ships, particularly destroyers, is of the greatest importance.

"Do the men who actually build the boats understand how vitally important is speed of building?" Admiral Sims asks. "Do they understand that we will win or lose according to whether we beat the submarine or it beats us? That we must depend chiefly upon destroyers for this? That destroyers on this side now are worth their weight in gold?"

"The point," he writes, "is that every man should feel that every blow of his own hammer is a blow at the enemy, that a certain number of blows will put him down and out, and that the sooner all these blows are struck the more valuable lives will be saved and the sooner we shall have peace and plenty. If your people will rush the ships and destroyers, you may rely upon the allied navies and armies to do the rest."

THE COTTON MARKET

Prices Drop 18 to 21 Points as News of Washington Conference Is Awaited.

No news has been received from Washington regarding the conference there between cotton spinners and the War Industries Board up to the time of closing, and consequently the local cotton market yesterday was largely left to the venturesome, with everybody else waiting for something definite to go on. There were various vague reports, and after the session was over telegrams were received by several firms indicating that the board within the next ten days will state definitely what price it proposes to pay for some very big orders of cotton goods. In the meanwhile, however, as is usually the case with the professional element, they had marked prices down, and after some backing and filling the session closed with the entire list down from 18 to 21 points net.

There were some substantial basis for the downward tendency in new crop months, in the shape of continued favorable crop and weather news, but there was nothing from Southern centres to indicate that dropping futures prices here had had any effect on the determination of the Southern grower to extract the maximum profit from what was left of the old crop. None the less, the market opened unsteady from 11 to 23 points off, and sold nearly 20 points further down in the morning.

There was not only further liquidation by speculative longs, but indications were that more cotton was being sold short of the market at favorable points than on previous days. However, to counterbalance this, as soon as prices had worked down, some trade buyers, bargain hunting, ventured into the field to a limited extent, after having been almost entirely absent on Monday and Tuesday. They caused a temporary revival early in the afternoon, but most of it was lost again in a rather weak close.

The first weekly weather report of the new season was issued yesterday, and was one of the best opening reports ever received by the trade. If the weather continues as fine in the South as it has so far, apparently nothing but labor and fertilizer shortage stand in the way of a record crop. Exports yesterday were 18,053 bales, a total of 3,066,143 for the season. Southern spot markets were unchanged, to 25 points lower.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Leading authorities in the grain trade believe that the present outlook for the new wheat crop is exceptionally favorable. The Winter wheat has passed through the Winter with little or no loss and recently the Southwestern States, in fact the whole Winter wheat belt, has been visited by splendid rains which should prove of untold value to the crop. The season is early in the Spring wheat States and the crop has gone into the ground under exceptionally favorable conditions. The continuation of the fight in Washington over the Gore fill to increase the price of wheat to $2.50 is still discouraging the sale of wheat by farmers and receipts at primary points continue small.

RYE.

The local market for rye was unsettled and nominal. Chicago houses were asking as high as $2.93 for Western rye, cost and freight, New York, but buyers were not interested especially as the Minneapolis market was 15 cents lower, making a loss of 24c in two days.

CORN.

Operations in the new corn contract will be inaugurated today and, in consequence, trading yesterday in the May position consisted largely of evening-up outstanding accounts. The new contract calls for the delivery of No. 4 mixed corn as a basis, and it was expected that the price would start around $1.45 to $1.50 for the July position. No limitations will be put on the price, but the rule prohibiting any one interest from controlling over 200,000 bushels will still be in force. Food Administrator Hoover sent a telegram to the local Exchange warning against any attempt in the direction of manipulation and urged operators to prove the economic value of Exchanges by showing that the objectives of the new contract can be accomplished voluntarily without the interference of Federal authority. In the local cash market kiln dried No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at $1.90½, No. 4 yellow $1.83¼, No. 3 white $2.20¼, cost and freight, New York.

OATS.

It seemed to be the prevailing opinion in the oats market that operations in the new contract in corn are likely to exert a bullish influence on oats values. At any rate, prices were higher, with a good demand from shorts, and at the close the market showed net gains of ⅝c to 1c. The Chicago Board will act on the new oats contract, and it will be voted upon by the members on next Tuesday. The export demand was not in evidence, but the cash position was firmer. In the local cash market natural was quoted at $1.04@$1.05 and clipped white, $1.05@$1.07½, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was only moderately active, but prices showed fair gains, owing to light offers and covering prompted by an advance of 5 to 10 points in the hog market and in sympathy with grain. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 31,000 head; estimated for Thursday, 22,000 head; Kansas City received 14,000 head and Omaha 17,500 head.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was lifeless and in absence of interest no prices were made. The spot position was steady to firm, but business was of a routine character.

COFFEE.

Prices in the coffee market at the start yesterday showed continued weakness. Liquidation was prompted largely by recent developments in the spot situation, although trading was quiet and the market was without special feature. First prices were 4 to 10 points higher, and the market closed at a net loss of 3 to 9 points. The local spot market was dull and nominally unchanged.

The daily cable from Brazil to the Exchange reported the Rio and Santos spot markets unchanged, with Santos futures 25 to 50 reis lower. Receipts at the two ports were 26,000 bags, compared with 15,000 bags a year ago. Clearances from Santos via sailer were 14,000 bags. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

There has been a little letup in the distribution of refined sugar the last day or so, although one or two of the local refiners have been able to meet the demands of the brokers in a fairly moderate way. Refiners are finding it difficult to keep working at full capacity, owing to non-arrivals of raw supplies in sufficient quantities. Shipments of raw sugars from Cuba and Porto Rico are being speeded up, and it is believed that shortly the situation here will be greatly relieved. The International Sugar Committee reported purchases of 118,000 bags of Cuban raw sugar, April shipment, at 4.985c, cost and freight.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 6,672 packages. The market has developed further strength on the better grades of fresh creamery, with sales of extras at 41½@42c and some of the fancier lots up to 43c. There was pretty good call for fine cars of centralized around 41c. Seconds and poorer qualities are still having very slow sale. Renovated, ladles, and packing stock firm, but market dull. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 42½@43c; extras, (92 score,) 41½@42c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 40@41½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 38@39½c; thirds, 36½@37½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 43½@44c; extras, 42½@43c; firsts, 40½@42c; seconds, 38½@40c; creamery, held as to quality, 34@40½c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 41½@42c; good to prime, 38½@41c; common to fair, 34@38c; renovated, extras, 38½@39c; firsts, 37@38c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35½@36½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 34@35c; seconds, 33c; lower grades, 31@32½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33@33½c; No. 2, 32@32½c; lower grades, 28@31½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 32,974 cases. Arrivals are still larger, but they are showing a material decrease as compared with last week; advices indicate lighter shipments in transit. Much of the accumulation here is still held above a prompt selling value and is going into the warehouses, and with more confident buying the market is showing a firmer tone, with some improvement in prices of most grades. We hear of no ability to place storage packings at any higher price than heretofore quoted, but the finer qualities of regular packed eggs are bringing some advance, and the medium and lower grades are also doing better. High grades of dirties and checks are reported sold in some cases a little above present quotations, but the market is irregular and prices fully sustained, according to quality. Nearby white eggs are still in liberal supply, and the storage houses often the chief outlet; regular distributing trade is dull, and only fancy selections reach top quotation in original condition; most of the business is in bunches of mixed marks at 38@39c. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 37@38c; storage packed firsts, 36@36½c; regular packed extra firsts, 35@36c; regular packed firsts, 33@35c; seconds and poorer, 31@32½c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 31@32c; No. 2 and poorer, 29@30½c; fresh gathered checks, ordinary to choice, dry, 27@30½c; State Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 38@40c; ordinary to prime, 37@38c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 36@38c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 36@38c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 37@38c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 35@36c; duck eggs, 40@55c; goose eggs, 60@70c.

REPORTS WAR BILLS FOR NIAGARA POWER

PLEA BY WAR DEPARTMENT

ALBANY, April 10.—Senator George F. Thompson of Niagara today got backing from the Federal Government for two power bills which, at a hearing before the Committee on War Measures, were denounced as "grabs" and a "stock jobbing game." The bills provide for the consolidation of the Hydraulic Power Company, the Niagara Power Company, and the Cliff Electric Distributing Company, which is a subsidiary of the Hydraulic Company.

The Federal Government came to the support of the scheme because consolidation would place the new corporation in a position to develop 170,000 horse power in excess of what is being developed by the two companies now without using any more of the water from Niagara River than is being used at present.

The War Department sent General Charles Keller to appear before the War Committee as its spokesman. After listening to what he had to say the committee went into executive session, amended the bills to eliminate objectionable features and safeguard the public interest and reported them. They will be passed as war measures under an emergency message from Governor Whitman, probably tomorrow.

General Keller told the committee that the United States Government was facing an exceedingly bad power situation that would be more acutely felt toward the middle of next Winter than it was now. He said that the Government had commandeered the entire power output of the two corporations it was proposed to consolidate, but was short 136,000 horse power in the energy required to keep war industries at Niagara Falls and in the frontier district moving.

Importance of Niagara.

"Niagara Falls is the only place in the country where the Government can undertake to make provisions for increased power production and get quick results," said General Keller. He urged that consolidation of the corporations was essential to the realization of the Government's plans.

Senator Ross Graves of Buffalo raised objections, although admiting that the Federal Government was entitled to all the help the State could give. He made a sensational attack at the last session on similar measures introduced by Senator Thompson, then as now amid the rush and confusion of the closing days. He suggested that General Keller and the Secretary of War could not possibly have studied the measures, or they would not have supported them.

General Keller hastened to explain that it was the project, not any particular bill for its realization, that he had been sent to advocate.

"No bill ever gave such broad powers," said the Senator. "It is giving away valuable franchise rights without a cent of return to the State. There is no provision to limit capitalization that will serve as a basis for rates, and we on the American side are paying now for power from the falls twice what they are paying in Canada. There is no provision for State supervision. It is outrageous, scandalous. The people would stone us if we dared to pass bills like these."

Objection was made to the bills by spokesmen for other power interests at Niagara Falls on the ground that realization of the project might render the new corporation an invader of their rights. The bills, it was pointed out, embodied no limitation to prevent the new company from monopolizing all the power possibilities latent in the river from the heads of the falls to Lewiston, at the end of the lower gorge.

Congress to Protect State.

General Keller assured the committee that, while the State would practically cede its right of control to the Federal Government, Congress would afford the State an opportunity to get all the revenue possible out of the power project. He said that $60,000,000 would be a fair capitalization for the proposed new corporation.

Senator Thompson pleaded that the amount of capitalization be not fixed in the bill, and said he would rather abandon his measures than have the Public Service Commission called in to advise the committee in the drafting of them.

The bills were amended to provide that the outlet of the water used by the enlarged company be situated not more than 1,000 feet below the intake point. This amendment was made to prevent the invasion of existing power rights of other corporations. Another amendment gives the State power to establish rental on all waters taken up to 15,000 cubic feet a second. The Public Service Commission for the Second District is given supervision over capitalization and the conditions under which the stock of the new corporation shall be issued.

NEW EFFORT TO REVIVE PROHIBITION FIGHT

Move to Bring About a Caucus of Republican Senators on Ratification Resolution.

ALBANY, April 10.—A fight over prohibition may enliven the closing moments of the present legislative session. The proposal for immediate ratification of the Federal prohibition amendment, embodied in a resolution introduced by Senator Hill of Broome, may be revived and again brought before the Legislature.

A movement is on foot to bring about a caucus of the Republican Senators on the Hill resolution. Eighteen votes in the caucus would make the resolution a party measure and insure its adoption by the Senate. In the event of favorable action by the upper house, the Assembly would be more than likely to follow suit, Speaker Sweet being openly committed to immediate ratification.

The plan was decided upon in Buffalo last Saturday, when Senators Thompson of Niagara, Wellington of Rensselaer, Gibbs of Erie, and Knight of Wyoming met accidentally in the room of the Appellate Division, where all had cases to argue. They talked the matter over and decided to call a meeting of Republican Senators friendly to prohibition. This meeting was held today in the committee room of Senator Thompson, with Senator Towner of Putnam, Republican whip of the Senate, presiding.

It was learned tonight that the following Senators had signed the petition: Hill of Broome, Graves and Gibbs of Erie, Towner of Putnam, Thompson of Niagara, Wellington of Rensselaer, Stivers of Sullivan, Fowler of Chautauqua, Marshall of Franklin, Whitney of Saratoga, Mullan of Monroe, Burlingame of Kings, Carson of Wayne, and Knight of Wyoming.

LEEWAY FOR TAX DODGERS.

The report from Washington that Commissioner of Internal Revenue Daniel C. Roper had issued instructions to Collectors throughout the country to run down tax dodgers was received with interest in New York revenue circles, where it was acknowledged that plans were being formulated for an intensive drive to ferret out income and other tax slackers.

Joseph F. Prendergast, Chief Deputy of the Third, or Upper Manhattan District, who was in charge of the office yesterday in the absence of Collector Mark Eisner in Washington, said his office was about to start a drive to round up persons who had evaded the payment of the various classes of taxes, other than the income and excess profits tax. First attention will be devoted, it was said, to running down those who had declined to pay excise, tobacco, and the commodity taxes carried in the War Revenue act. The drive for the apprehension and probable arrest of this class of offender will probably start here next Monday.

From what was said by officials in New York yesterday, it was apparent that the roundup of income tax dodgers will not begin here until after June 15, when all payments for taxes of this kind must be in. Following the date mentioned, energetic measures will be adopted to punish shirkers.

"Up to the present," Collector William H. Edwards of the Second, or Wall Street District, said, "I have been accepting everyone's word as being as good as the Government's. In my district we have between 125,000 and 150,000 income tax returns to inspect, and when we have ascertained just who have filed returns, we can start out to run down those who haven't. Up to date, I haven't found a single slacker. We are, however, working on a double check basis, and later on will be in a position to get after those who have not filed returns. We will do this through a process of elimination."

It was learned that both Collectors Edwards and Eisner have received numerous anonymous letters from taxpayers giving the names of persons, alleged by the writers, as not having filed income tax returns. Inspectors are now investigating these cases.

Collector Edwards yesterday notified owners of places of amusement in his district that they, as well as ticket brokers, must register at the Custom House on or before April 15. Originally, the date of such registration was set for April 1, but was postponed two weeks.

DISMISS OLD CUSTOMS MAN.

Daniel O. Sprague Had Been in Service 28 Years—No Explanation.

His associates were puzzled yesterday by the dismissal from the Customs Service of Daniel O. Sprague, an acting Deputy Collector with an office in the Custom House. Sprague had been in the service for more than twenty-eight years. He was removed by Collector Byron R. Newton on Tuesday, but the fact did not become known until yesterday.

Beyond confirming the fact that Sprague's dismissal was the result of charges growing out of the arrest and conviction of Edmond Rousselot, who called himself the Marquis de Castillo, Collector Newton declined to discuss the case. It was said that Sprague entered a general denial of the charges. Before becoming Acting Deputy Collector, Sprague had been on duty on steamship piers, where he supervised the examination of passengers' baggage. He was transferred after an investigation conducted by Collector Dudley Field Malone of the manner in which Mrs. Elizabeth Gordon Pelton, daughter-in-law of the late Senator Mark Hanna, had brought twelve trunks into the United States. Mr. Sprague was not found last night.

DENIES DELEHANTY PETITION

Supreme Court Justice Sawyer, assigned by Governor Whitman to hear the quo warranto suit brought by James A. Delehanty to oust Judge John F. McIntyre from General Sessions, yesterday denied the application by the latter's counsel to set aside the verdict in favor of Judge McIntyre on the ground that it was against the weight of the evidence. John W. Hannon argued that the evidence showed clearly the election of Delehanty. Herbert R. Limburg, for Judge McIntyre, insisted that the ballots were not in the same condition at the trial as they were on the night of election.

Counsel for Mr. Delehanty announced that an appeal would be taken, and the court gave a month's time for the preparation of the papers. He directed that the Corporation Counsel take charge of the ballots pending the appeal.

SINCLAIR OIL PASSES QUARTERLY DIVIDEND

Head of Corporation Says Conservation of Earnings Was Deemed Best in Present Conditions.

Important dividend announcements were made by several corporations yesterday. The New York Central Railroad Company declared the usual quarterly disbursement of 1¼ per cent., payable May 1 to stockholders of record April 13. At the normal time for the dividend meeting in March, action was postponed, and for this reason the declaration was considered as indicating that the management had received the approval of the Railroad Administration for the continuation of the return to shareowners.

The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America declared its initial dividend of 5 per cent. on the capital stock, due Aug. 1 to stockowners of record July 15. The last report on earnings showed that the company's income was expanding favorably. The corporation's plants are under Government control as a war measure.

Burns Brothers, the retail coal firm, declared a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. on the common stock, this being an increase of 1 per cent. Since last May the stockholders have received quarterly 1½ per cent. in cash and 1 per cent. in stock. The stock dividend has been discontinued, it was learned, until a date in the future, when a substantial disbursement may be made. The dividend will be paid May 15 to stockholders on the books May 1. The usual preferred stock disbursement of 1¾ is due May 1 to stock of record April 15.

Directors of the Sinclair Oil & Refining Corporation passed the quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share. The action had been forecast by the recent decline of the stock from around 40 to under 27 on the Stock Exchange. H. F. Sinclair, President, said in a statement after the meeting that it had been deemed best, in view of present conditions, to follow a conservative policy and conserve earnings.

Mr. Sinclair asserted that the corporation had become to a large extent independent of railroad transportation through the laying of a pipe line from the Oklahoma and Kansas fields to Chicago, which delivers oil to the refineries at Kansas City and East Chicago. The Directors authorized yesterday the extension of the pipe line seventy miles further, to the properties in the Garber, Okla., field, and also arranged to subscribe to $500,000 Liberty bonds of the Third loan.

The corporation was formed two years ago, being a combination of a number of refining and producing concerns in the Southwest. There are 1,000,000 shares of stock outstanding. Net earnings in the last fiscal year were equal to more than $8 a share, after allowing for charges and depreciation.

MAYOR OPPOSES CITY BILLS.

Going to Albany to Ask Whitman's Aid Against Mandatory Measures.

Mayor Hylan and several heads of departments will go to Albany today to confer with Governor Whitman regarding a number of bills affecting the city. The Mayor is particularly interested in the latest pension bill affecting city employes. The Mayor will ask the Governor to oppose all bills providing for mandatory increases in salaries or for the creation of new jobs. He is also expected to express to Governor Whitman his strong disapproval of the Ottinger West Side bill.

A delegation of Brooklyn officials, headed by President Riegelmann and Commissioner of Public Works Joseph A. Guider, will also go to Albany today to support measures affecting Brooklyn. The principal measure is the Coney Island Canal bill, which has passed the House and is now in the Senate, where it is being piloted by Senator A. W. Burlingame. It provides for distributing the expense among the Federal Government, the State, and the city.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

In an active close yesterday the market on the Exchange was subjected to a heavy selling pressure, and sold off sharply. The general list showed fractional net losses for the day. Irregularity and a yielding tendency were evidenced throughout the day, despite the fact that at midday the market for a time gave the appearance of buoyancy.

TRIBUTE TO PADEREWSKI.

As a tribute to Ignace Paderewski and his work for Poland, a testimonial meeting was held last night at Carnegie Hall by the Civic Forum. Its proceeds will go to the Polish Relief Fund. Following an address by Dr. John H. Finley, who presided, the artist spoke of the ideals and ambitions of the Polish people and the important part they must surely play in making up the future map of Europe. He said his people were heart and soul with the Allies and were hoping and praying for the decisive victory of the ideals for which America stands.

"It is Poland that has stood between Germany and the treasures of the East, which she so greatly covets," said he, "and it is prejudice and years of doubting that have kept Poland from taking its place among the important nations of the world. Among its 35,000,000 inhabitants there are fewer dialects than in any country of Europe."

Robert Underwood Johnson read his poem, "Paderewski, the Patriot," and Frederick C. Walcott of the Food Administration at Washington, told some of his personal observations in the warridden country. A rare print, showing the crowning of the first King of Poland, was presented to the pianist as a "token of the love and esteem of his legion of friends in this country who desire to honor him as a man and a patriot."

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Quick resale of a Bronx apartment by an operating syndicate to an investor was the feature of a quiet realty market yesterday.

The Morganstern Brothers Syndicate sold to an investing client of A. Lions, for cash, the five-story apartment house at the northeast corner of Vyse Avenue and Home Street, known as 1,202 Vyse Avenue and covering a plot 54 by 100. SEDITION BILL PASSED BY SENATE

NOW GOES TO CONFERENCE

Early Agreement by the Two Houses Expected — Heavy Penalties Provided for Disloyalty.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The Sedition bill, prohibiting, under penalties of twenty years' imprisonment and $10,000 fine, language or acts of disloyalty, or obstruction of the army draft and Liberty Loans, was passed today by the Senate without a record vote. The bill now goes to conference between House and Senate, and final enactment is expected soon.

Protracted and bitter debate marked consideration of the measure, the passage of which had been strongly urged by Administration officials, to permit the Government to deal with disloyal agitators and check the growing danger of mob violence.

Although modified to meet the objections of Senators who contended that the original draft would curb legitimate freedom of speech, the bill retains the broad inhibition of words or acts which "support or favor the cause of the German Empire or its allies * * * or oppose the cause of the United States." It also would punish willful and "disloyal, profane, scurrilous, contemptuous, or abusive" language about the American form of government, Constitution, military or naval forces, flag or uniform," and willful utterances designed to curtail production of essential war materials.

The Senate adopted an amendment by Senator Jones of New Mexico providing for dismissal of Federal executive employes making disloyal statements. This was a substitute for one introduced by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania several days ago after attacks had been made on George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, and other officials on account of their writings in the past.

Senator Overman of North Carolina accused the Pennsylvania Senator of "having some official in mind" in introducing his amendment. Senator Penrose replied that he "had several men in mind." Senator Nelson of Minnesota said he understood the proposed amendment was to apply to cases like that of George Creel.

Senator Lodge, after he and other Senators had denounced alleged disloyal publications in the German-American press, withdrew his amendment prohibiting German language publication unless paralleled by English translation. Senator Nelson opposed the amendment, declaring it an "insult" to loyal Americans of German blood. Senator Borah of Idaho did not press an amendment he had offered to repeal the Postmaster General's press censorship authority conferred in the original Espionage act.

With an intimation that it might be stricken out in conference, an amendment by Senator France of Maryland providing that the bill shall not impair liberty to speak "what is true, with good motives, and for justifiable ends," was adopted.

QUOTE BRYAN AS AIDING GERMAN PROPAGANDA

WAHINGTON, April 10.—The Senate Committee investigating the German-American Alliance had read into the record today a translation of a publication in the official bulletin of the German-American Alliance which purported to be a German version of a speech delivered by W. J. Bryan before a German organization in Chicago, in 1914, when Mr. Bryan was Secretary of State. The article quoted Mr. Bryan as urging Germans to obtain greater representation at primaries and elections.

Another article read to the committee from the alliance bulletin quoted the President of the Alabama alliance as urging, in a speech in 1912, the increasing of the State membership as a means of enlarging the State organization's political influence.

Charges that German language newspapers in the United States had tried to stir up bad feeling between this country and Japan were made by Professor E. E. Sperry of Syracuse University in his testimony today.

Professor Sperry declared German propagandists had urged the use of the German language and the reading of German literature in the United States to prevent the assimilation of German immigrants and to retard their adoption of American customs. He read articles published in Germany which asserted that within 100 years the United States would be completely controlled by Germany.

Professor Sperry said the German Reichstag in 1912 appropriated one million marks for furthering the teaching of German in schools in foreign countries. The German Secretary of Foreign Affairs arranged for sending teachers from Germany to foreign nations, and those who were particularly successful in this propaganda were decorated, he said. He had no record of any decoration of teachers in the United States.

GERMAN PUT IN DOUGH BIN.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 10.—Because of alleged pro-Teutonic utterances, William Prisse, 51 years old, a registered German, was thrown into a dough bin at a bakery by two Americans today, according to a story told the police by Prisse. He added that while he was nearly smothered in dough the men fired several shots at his feet, but failed to strike them.

Prisse came to the United States several years ago. He has a brother in the German army, according to the police.

PLOTTER ARMS INDIANS.

Poison Also Given to Piutes and Other Tribes by Stranger in Nevada

RENO, Nev., April 10.—State police and special agents of the Government are being sent into Eastern Nevada, where Piute, Goshute, and Shoshone Indians are reported to have been supplied with arms and poison and advised to attack Indian agents and white settlers.

According to statements made by loyal Indians, the arms and poison were supplied by a white man, whose identity has not been discovered. His operations are said to have extended over several hundred miles of territory, extending from Pioche and Elko, Nev., and as far east as Deep Creek, Utah.

G. B. Kulenkampff and F. Stallforth Accused of Being Enemy Plotters.

EXONERATE BASIL RUYSDAEL

Governors Also Decide Charge of Pro-Germanism Against H. Lampe Was Unfounded.

The Board of Governors of the New York Athletic Club voted early yesterday morning, after a session of several hours, to expel Gustave B. Kulenkampff and Frederico Stallforth for being pro-German and to exonerate Basil Ruysdael, the basso of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, and Henry Lampe, formerly connected with the North German Lloyd line.

Stallforth is a German who was connected with the plots of Captain von Rintelen, who spent several million dollars on German enterprises in this country. He was sent to jail for refusing to answer questions regarding his connections with Captain von Rintelen, David Lamar, Hugo Schmidt, and others.

Kulenkampff, who figured in several German plots, escaped arrest until last month, when he was put in the Tombs on suspicion of communicating with Germans carrying on propaganda in South America. In 1917 the Department of Justice discovered that $750,000 had been mysteriously placed to his credit here, and traced $350,000 of it to German plotters in South America.

The Board of Governors also decided to investigate several other members of the club and to take measures to prevent any further such incidents as the alleged celebration of the German offensive in the bar of the club, which led to the present investigation. One thing which had made many members of the club indignant, according to President Jeremiah T. Mahoney, is the fact that those in charge of the purchase of books and periodicals for the club had provided a rich store of pro-German publications. Mr. Mahoney said that the head of the Library Committee for a time was pro-German, and had tried to arrange to keep Teuton apologetics always at the elbow of members of the club. A resolution was recently adopted to purge the library of all matter putting the blame for the war on Belgium, England, or other nations and of anything tending to justify Germany.

The official account of the proceeding of the Board of Governors was given out by President Mahoney as follows:

Basil Ruysdael is of Dutch parentage, has always been known as strongly Ally, and has asserted repeatedly that the charges against him were the spite work of an individual.

A general meeting of members of the club has been called for next Monday, to expel all pro-Germans and enemy aliens.

Dealer in Chinese Curios Arrested as an Enemy Alien.

Suspected of being in communication, through secret channels, with the Austrian Government, Gustave Martini, a member of the Sino-American Trading Corporation, dealers in Chinese curios, at 37 East Twenty-eighth Street, was arrested by officials of the Department of Justice yesterday and locked up in the Tombs pending further investigation. Martini was born in Kiel, Germany. He insisted yesterday that he was loyal to the United States.

According to the Federal agents certain codes found on Martini purported to show that he was in communication with an Austrian officer, Fritz Materna by name, who left the United States on the same steamship with ex-Ambassador Dumba. Martini admitted that he had known Materna and that he was on friendly terms with him, and that he had on one occasion loaned the Austrian officer $5,000, which the latter repaid.

Martini said he was a dealer in Chinese curios, and that he was in China at the time the United States entered the war. There he met a German merchant, who died leaving a request that he look after certain matters in this country relating to the disposition of the merchant's estate.

The Federal Grand Jury yesterday indicted Onofray Makarenko, a Russian, on a charge of violating the Espionage act by trying to induce Russians in this countryto oppose the war. Makarenko was arrested at Hastings-on-the-Hudson. He was formerly employed at a plant of the National Conduit and Cable Company.

Thomas Welsh, 23 years old, who was convicted last Monday under the Trading with the Enemy act of bringing a communication into this country outside of the regular mails, was sentenced by Judge Hand in the Federal District Court yesterday to one year and a day in the Atlanta Penitentiary. The communication had to do with the Sinn Fein movement in Ireland, and was intended for the Sinn Fein leaders in the United States. Welsh was employed on the steamship Celtic.

The personal effects of Dr. Karl Buenz, former German Minister to Mexico, who was sentenced to an eighteen-month term in Atlanta for conspiring to make New York a base for German ocean raiders, will be auctioned off today at the Fifth Avenue Auction Rooms, at Fifth Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street. Dr. Buenz has not yet been taken to Atlanta, the final disposition of his case being still dependent upon the outcome of an appeal for a pardon which has been made to Washington.

Seditious Soldier Gets Ten Years.

CHICAGO, April 10.—Ernest F. Zuschlag, private in the 345th Infantry, Camp Pike, Ark., formerly of Chicago, has been sentenced to ten years on the rock pile at Leavenworth, Kan., by court-martial. The prisoner, at the time of the sinking of the Tuscania, expressed the wish that the U-boats would sink every American transport.

Pacifist Tarred and Feathered.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 10.—William Madison Hicks, President of the World Peace League, was tarred and feathered at Elk City, Okla., last night and ordered to leave the county. Hicks is under Federal indictment on disloyalty charges.

GEN. F. E. RESCHE DROPPED FROM ARMY

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Discharge from the Federal service of Brig. Gen. Frederick E. Resche of Minnesota, a German-born officer commanding a brigade of the 34th National Guard Division at Camp Cody, New Mexico, was announced today in army orders.

Failure to maintain his command on an efficient footing is the cause officially announced for giving the officer an honorable discharge. Certain remarks attributed to him, however, have drawn attention to the question of his loyalty, and while no overt act of disloyalty has been charged his utterances are being investigated.

The primary desire of the War Department, it was said at the department today, was to get out of the service an officer of high rank who was shown by the reports of inspectors to be lacking in zeal and enterprise in preparing his command for conflict with the German Army. For that reason he was promptly discharged and the question of his loyalty left to be passed upon by the civil branch of the Government. The discharge makes a civilian of General Resche. Had he been a regular army officer the War Department's course would have been different.

The 34th Division is composed of troops from Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota, and Nebraska. General Resche's successor has not yet been selected.

DULUTH, Minn., April 10.—Brig. Gen. F. E. Resche, discharged today from the Federal service, was born in Germany and received his early military training in the Prussian Army. Some years ago he was Captain of Police here. He was active in National Guard circles and rose rapidly from the ranks to command of the Minnesota brigade.

THE clothes are the answer to that question, not the price. If you figure cost by the month or year, you'll find that a suit of all-wool cloth, finely tailored, and well designed, gives long wear and in the end costs less than one that doesn't last long or look right.
